SOUTH END MAN UNDER ARREST

Woman Says She Was Stolen in Boston from Man with Whom She Eloped from Fall River

As a result of an amazing story told by Mary J. Assad, a 17-year-old Fall River girl, Moses Namey, 25, of Hudson street, South End, was arrested by Sergeant Anderson of the Lagrange street station and held in $1,500 for a hearing Thursday when arraigned in the Municipal court on an abduction charge.

Miss Assad, who is a Syrian, eloped to Boston two weeks ago with Abdu it Jammen. Before the young couple could secure a marriage license Miss Assad was stolen from her lover, according to the story she tells the police, and spirited away to Hartford, Vt., by Namey. She says he forced her to marry him last Thursday.

Here is the story of the alleged abduction as told by Miss Assad to Sergeant Anderson:

"Abdo H. Jammen started for Boston with me, a week ago Sunday. We

MOHR BOY KNEW THE DOCTOR'S SECRETS, SAYS MISS ORMSBY

By FLORENCE ORMSBY.
Dr. Mohr's Secretary.

Providence, R. I., Feb. 12.—I saw much of Charlie Mohr, the boy who is credited with changing the minds of the jurors in the recent murder trial. Charlie is ten, with a head that would do justice to many men I have met.

Mrs. Mohr always told me her son was her confidant and constant companion. She would say she kept nothing from him, and I believe her statement is true.

The boy was almost a daily visitor at the office on Stewart street. He would play about the office and on the stoop in the rear of the building. He could do anything with the doctor. All he had to do was ask his father for any amount of money, and it was forthcoming without a murmur.

Dr. Mohr would buy suit after suit for his son, who would either accompany him to the store, or the doctor would send me to select them.

Charlie was a precocious boy, and had his ears and eyes open at all times. Often he would ask the name of some patient. On such occasions I would not tell him the name, but would try to evade the question by giving a fictitious name. He would often let me know that he did not believe me.

His questions were annoying at times. I did not believe that it was the place for the boy, neither did I believe that he should ask such questions, but I presume he had his own reasons for asking.

I realized he was there for a purpose, and it was not within my province to comply with his wishes.

When he wanted to know certain phases of his father's business he would telephone from the office to Newport to the doctor. I have known the telephone bills to be $20 per month. On such occasions the doctor would spend much time on the phone talking with his son.

At this end of the phone it was a simple matter to realize that the boy had an object in calling. The conversation would be about

ROB U. S. IN PANAMA CLAIMS

Goethals Charges That His Expose in His Annual Report Was Suppressed by the Government

Washington, Feb. 12.—The United States is being "robbed" of between $16,000,000 and $17,000,000 through a too liberal attitude on the part of the Panama-United States Joint Land Commission, according to General George W. Goethals, Governor of the Canal zone. Enormous extravagant payments are being allowed private owners of land needed for canal purposes, Goethals told the House commerce committee.

Much of this money is going to "squatters," with no title to the land, in his opinion, and he suggested legislation that will compel payments only on the value of the land as of 1903, when the Canal zone was acquired. He also asked the committee to push through a bill terminating the activity of the joint commission within six months.

CLAIMS U. S. IS "ROBBED."

"It is rather hard to stay there and see our government robbed the way it has been in the past," said Goethals to the committee. "If the commission—and we have had several—were held down to the valuation placed on the lands in 1903 it would have paid claims hardly aggregating $1,000,000, but the claims paid now aggregate something like $17,000,000 or $18,000,000. The commission has taken the ground that we are a big republic and the Panamanians are rather poor and that we should pay liberally for these lands."

The general charged the commission with ignoring the provisions of the Panama treaty under which it was authorized to pay land claims. When members of the committee asked reasons for this attitude Goethals replied:

"They are above all reason; they are an international court."

Goethals gave the committee instances where the commission awarded claimants 3,000 or 4,000 per cent. more than the value of lands in 1903. He declared that claimants, who had already agreed to turn their lands over to the government at moderate figures, had later repudiated their agreements

Expect Arrest in Anarchist's Plot to Kill Chicago Archbishop and Scores of Prominent Men

By International News Service.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—Details of a sinister plot by a supposed fanatic whose inflamed mind impelled him to attempt wholesale murder of the guests at the banquet given Archbishop George W. Mundelein at the University Club Thursday night were in the hands of police and club officials today.

The one hundred prominent guests at the banquet who became violently ill after eating the soup served at the banquet were all recovered today.

"There is no doubt," said N. J. Doherty, manager of the club, "that the poisoning of the banquet guests was the result of the plot of a single man to kill the hundreds at the tables. We know who the man is and we have found a well equipped laboratory of poisons in his quarters, including hundreds of vials of deadly poisons of a dozen varieties.

"We expect his arrest today."

Doherty also said that the literature found in the man's rooms included anarchist propaganda, I. W. W. pamphlets and writings by Emma Goldman.

Doherty spoke of the literature as a "library of hate." He said the receptacles in which the poison was brought to the University Club kitchen were found, only partly emptied.

His theory was that the poisoner was interrupted before he completed his plan and that this accounted for the fact that only part of the guests became ill instead of all of them being killed.

It is believed that arsenic was in the soup.

The banquet was paid by the board of governors of the Catholic Church Extension Society, and many non-Catholics were among the guests. Governor Dunne, Roger Sullivan, John J. Mitchell, judges of the various courts and representatives of all branches of judicial and commercial life were present.

Theodore W. Robinson, vice-president of the Illinois Steel Company; Thomas J. Webb of the Board of Review, Andrew J. Graham, Henry Legler, city librarian; Judge Charles A. McDonald, Harry Pelz and Jerome Crowley were among those who had to be attended by physicians.

FIRE IN CANADIAN MUNITIONS PLANT

Montreal, Feb. 12.—Fire believed to have been set by an incendiary broke out early today in the forge department of the Canadian Car and Foundry Company's plant at Turcot, near Montreal. All available apparatus was called to the scene to prevent the flames from spreading to the main plant, at which ammunitions is being made for the British army. In the belief that the fire was set by German agents the authorities ordered the arrest of all persons found in the vicinity of the plant who could not explain their presence there.

ROW DEVELOPS OVER WILLARD FIGHT

New York, Feb. 12.—Soon after the reports reached town that Jess Willard was confined to his bed, in Chicago, with grippe, there came rumors that the proposed bout between him and Frank Moran in Madison Square Garden would not be held. Tom Jones, as report has it, has split with Tex Rickard.

Immediately after the first news reached this city that Willard was ill Jones and Rickard became embroiled in an argument. Though as yet the break hasn't actually come it would not be at all surprising if the Kankakee barber opened a breach which won't heal before March 8.

Jones, it is said, has told Rickard in no uncertain manner that he must have something to say regarding the price of seats for the proposed show. He has told friends that unless he does have something to say there won't be any scrap for the heavyweight title, at least with Rickard on the promoting end.

When run to earth Rickard ad-

There Is Money In Chicken Raising

Thousands of men and women in New England are making a very profitable living raising poultry. These people are not only making money in raising prize poultry, but from raising the common garden variety and selling their eggs for eating purposes.

New England is a wonderful market for fresh eggs. The demand for strictly fresh eggs is very high. The truth of this statement is very easily verified by asking any grocer the prevailing price of strictly fresh eggs.

Any person with a good-sized back yard, living in the suburbs, can raise chickens and make money. If you are interested in chicken raising or want to go into this business and make money, be sure and read the Poultry Ads and news every Sunday in some particular occasion that the boy should record in his mind. He would ask his father the most common questions imaginable. At the conclusion of each talks Charles would drive, make some remark. I have heard him say:

"I wonder if he thinks I believe that."

He wanted to know how much money his father was taking in. A bunch of notes, how much the money was, but I did not feel that it was my duty to explain such facts to a mere child.

The police thought the boy was slight, while not naturally ill, but home life and his questions could not be considered proper.

The first and only time Mrs. Mohr called at the office was after I was installed there about two weeks. I was told by the children that his wife would pay me a visit and try and have me act as a spy. He warned me not to take anything she said about him too seriously.

Mrs. Mohr was described to me by the doctor, and it was not long before a woman with a little boy arrived and made herself known. Before the call a woman phoned me, asking if the doctor was in. I told he he would not be in, as he was at his Summer home as Newport. When she was certain the doctor would not be there she said she was Mrs. Mohr, and that she was coming to see me.

TELLS OF WIDOW'S VISIT.

I was worried when she called, for fear the doctor might arrive unexpectedly. To allay my fears, Mrs. Mohr told me not to worry, as Charles had called the doctor up before they left their home, and she was certain he would not come to town that day.

"You know," said Mrs. Mohr, "the doctor will discharge you if he knows I called, and if he does I will get you a job."

I had never seen the boy before, and while his mother was talking he roamed about the office, boy like, taking down everything he could reach and telling the history of each article.

He knew everything in the place. He knew all about articles. "So and so," he would say, "gave that to father."

During the time Mrs. Mohr was in the office she told me all about her husband's business. At one time the conversation was private, and the boy was standing by his mother listening. I reminded her that the conversation was of a nature that a boy should not hear.

"He understands everything," answered Mrs. Mohr.

OPENED OFFICE DESK.

I was amazed at the conversation that took place in the presence of the boy.

"Don't mind me," Charlie said.

The remark pleased Mrs. Mohr, who patted his hair and told him how clever he was.

The visit lasted some two hours, and during that time Mrs. Mohr went from one room to the other.

"I painted that," she said, pointing to a vase on the bookcase. Now it so happened that the vase in question had been purchased by me the week before.

I am not going to give my personal views of the visit. Mrs. Mohr wanted to look in the desk, saying she could open it by forcing the roll-top. It took her but a minute to press in the roll-top, springing the lock. As she started to open one of the drawers I pulled the top down, saying the doctor would be mad if he knew I allowed her to open the desk.

WANTED TO TAKE TOY.

To say I was in a predicament is putting it mildly. It was on this occasion that a toy was lying on top of the desk. Mrs. Mohr told Charlie not to touch it, as his father would know she had called.

Charlie wanted to take the toy with him, but his mother would not allow him to do so. That was the first and only time Mrs. Mohr called at the office while I was there.

I was frightened the next day when the doctor asked me if anyone had called. I told him of the patients that had called, and with much fear mentioned that Mrs. Mohr called with her son.

The mention of her name was like a bombshell to the doctor.

He stormed about the office, and later looked through the desk. I told him that nothing was disturbed.

$24,000 Mrs. Mohr's Share of Estate

Providence, Feb. 12 — The first authoritative announcement of the share which Mrs. Elizabeth Francis Mohr will receive in the estate of the murdered Dr. C. Franklin Mohr, under the terms of the agreement now signed with the son and daughter of Dr. Mohr, by his first marriage, was made today.

By this agreement, sale of the entire estate must be made as soon as practicable. Of the proceeds of the sale, the first $5,000 it was agreed, was to go to Mrs. Mohr. The remainder of the estate, valued at $100,000, was to be divided equally into five shares, one share to go to Mrs. Mohr, one share each to her children, Charles and Virginia, and one share each to Charles Manning Mohr and Mrs. Adele Marr, the other children.

In this way Mrs. Mohr's share in the Mohr estate is not expected to exceed $24,000 in all. As Charles F. and Virginia, her children, are not of age, their share will be held in trust, Mrs. Mohr may be expected to acquire control, amounts to $62,000.

AGREEMENT BEFORE TRIAL.

This agreement was made two months ago after many tentative plans. When finally the compromise between the two branches of the family was reached, the formal papers were sent to Baltimore for the signature of Mrs. Marr, and for the signature of Charles Manning Mohr.

The final draft, with all the necessary signatures, reached Providence again only today. Dr. Hall Hurley, a brother of Richard Hurley, who is with Arthur Cushing, custodian of Mrs. Mohr's estate, was asked to have the estate accurately appraised and immediately sold, to permit the most equable division according to the agreement.

The estate was conservatively estimated at $100,000 in value. This estimate, it was said, was based on the amount for which it was appointed to bring under the terms of the agreement.

No word as to Mrs. Mohr's hiding place has been received here. Knowing the methods of procedure and settlement of the estate, and wishing to avoid any details connected with the suit, Mrs. Mohr left Providence secretly, withheld even from them the exact location of the place in which she has fled for rest and recuperation from the telling effects of her ordeal of trial.

BROWN 'GLAD SHE'S FREE."

The news of Mrs. Mohr's share in the Mohr estate, and of her flight into the country for quiet, was given to Cecil Victor Brown and Henry S. Spelman today.

"That's fine," Brown declared. "I hope she enjoys herself. I'm glad that she at least convinced the jury that she was not guilty. I'm glad she is free to take a rest in the country."

Spelman and Brown were in the court when told about Mrs. Mohr. Both were surprised at the ability of Lewis to win them clear, and were much interested in Lewis' departure today for Boston for a conference with colored leaders to start a national campaign to secure a new trial for them.

William H. Lewis left today for New York after filing yesterday with Attorney John B. Edwards, appeal for new trial on the ground that the jury misunderstood the charge of Judge Stearns, on expections, and on the claim of new evidence which they have discovered.

20,000 DESTITUTE ORPHANS IN VIENNA

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 12.—"There are 20,000 destitute in Vienna rendered fatherless by the war."

Mrs. Judith Kroger Hamilton of this city, who has just returned from Vienna, made this statement today. She is here to raise funds to support these children, under the auspices of the Austro-Hungarian American Committee. The committee's slogan of "The Babies are Neutral."

"We are trying to get Americans to adopt these destitute children," she said. "The conditions of these orphans and their mothers is pitiable. Some of them have no food at all and they would not last over night. There is little or no milk to be obtained there now."

BRITAIN ADDS TO MUNITION PLANTS

London, Feb. 12.—The Minister of Munitions announces through the Press Bureau that 116 additional establishments have been taken over by the government, bringing the total controlled munitions establishments up to 2,834.

WAR SUMMARY

A possibility is indicated, in today's French reports, of a German offensive in a new quarter—near the Swiss frontier.

Paris said yesterday that the Germans had fired two heavy calibre shells at the fortress of Belfort. Today's report says ten more shells were fired.

Belfort is the southernmost of the French line of border forts. These are Verdun, Toul, Epinal and Belfort. Either Verdun or Belfort must be smashed before this fortress line along the French frontier can be seriously threatened.

It is not impossible that the Germans may spring a surprise attack on Belfort.

The fighting in France still continues of a desperate character, the Germans on the defensive against French counter attacks. Both sides have lost heavily, while the material gain appears to be about evenly balanced, the Germans having slightly the better of the argument.

The Czar has gone to the Russian front, and attacks there are becoming more vigorous. The reported capture of Usciczko is now discredited, since Petrograd itself does not claim this success. Thus far the Russian attacks have accomplished nothing save slaughter.

In Mesopotamia, the British in Kut-el-Amara attempted an attack in the nature of a sortie and were driven back.

England has gathered 300,000 men in Egypt, to meet any attack there—and very possibly to keep down the rebellions that are forever springing up among the tribesmen.

Berlin claims to have sunk a British cruiser in the North Sea. The cruiser is given as the Arabis. No such vessel is listed in the naval publications. London says the story is untrue, and that if any vessel was lost, it was only a mine sweeper.

Premier Briand of France, in Rome, says "My mission has been a complete success," but he does not say what his mission was. There were reports today that he hurried to Rome to block peace negotiations between Austria and Italy.

Rumania is still reported about to join the allies.

Belgium denies she was offered peace terms.

The United States will be guided by her treaties with Prussia in the Appam case, and England loses her contention that The Hague conventions should rule.

U. S. MAY REVERSE POLICY

By JOHN EDWIN NEVIN,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Washington, Feb. 12.—Definite decision on pressing matters of international moment will be reached by President Wilson well away from outside influence. He was cruising on the lower reaches of the Potomac River today in the Mayflower. Before him were recommendations by Secretary of State Lansing dealing with the foreign situation; pending the German prize Appam asylum at Norfolk until the end of the war and making her immune from legal process by the British government to recover the vessel; that the development of the submarine warfare warrants the United States in reversing its decision regarding the carrying of guns for any purpose.

In addition the President had a wealth of confidential information dealing with the British trade controversy and the allied interference with American rights, on which he was ordered to plan a course of action.

There is no attempt to disguise the concern with which publication of the announcement by the Teutonic allies that they will commencing on March 1, resume their submarine campaign against all vessels carrying arms, either for offence or defence. The complete text of the German note was en route from Berlin, but Secretary Lansing furnished the President with the summary sent by Ambassador Gerard which was received yesterday.

Because of the brief interval before this grave crisis of action is begun, this government must act immediately in determining on its plans. Secretary Lansing is understood to believe that merchant vessels should be armed.

The suggestion before the President is calling for he refusal to permit warships vessels receiving clearance from American ports that mount cannon. The situation is very delicate, and a reversal of policy at this time will bring dire protests from Great Britain and her allies.

Yet the German announcement is simply an acceptance of conditions initiated at the State Department and intended to settle instead of complicate the submarine situation officials declined to forecast what the President's decision in the matter will be.

BRITISH DENIES NEW CRUISER SUNK

London, Feb. 12.—A Berlin official statement receive here says a British cruiser has been sunk by a German torpedo boat and another British cruiser torpedoed. The British official press bureau denies this.

The German statement is to the effect that the German torpedo craft met British cruisers off the Dogger bank early Tuesday and sank one of the new cruiser Arabis and torpedoed a second cruiser.

In giving out the German message for publication, the press bureau appended the following note:

"The British admiralty states that the cruisers above mentioned were four unprotected vessels, three of which have returned safely."

PUNISH ARABS FOR ATTACK ON BRITISH

London, Feb. 12—The war office announces: "A dispatch received regarding the operations in Mesopotamia reports that as the result of an attack by Arabs, supported by friendly, on a reconnoitering party returning to Nasiriyeh from a reconnaissance up to the Shatt-el-hai branch of the Tigris river, the British suffered casualties aggregating 272, and the Arabs lost considerably over 200 men killed.

"A small punitive expedition completely surprised the Arabs and destroyed four of their villages. The British suffered only six casualties."

PRINCE OF WIED ARMS ALBANIANS

Paris, Feb. 12.—The Geneva correspondent of the Temps estimates that the Austrian army now operating in Albania consists of 10,000 men.

The correspondent says Prince William of Wied, former ruler of Albania, is now on the frontier of that country, having been supplied with funds from Austria and Germany for the purpose of organizing an army of Albanians. It is said he has already brought together 10,000 men.

ket increases and other like developments, where will such practice end."

It is said that John P. Moore and Charles Curtis, Collusion Line officials, both of them, by the way, served on the Finance Commission and urged the jailing of men in City Hall whose crimes were juvenile compared with Cobb, have requested the district attorneys to drop the Cobb cases.

"This may be true, and if true, we do not think it sufficient ground for Mr. Pelletier to base his action. Certainly Mr. Joseph P. Kennedy, through whose clemeness the crime in the Collateral Loan Company was uncovered, did not urge such action. We opine that this case will plague the district attorney later."

It would appear that the former Mayor hints in his last sentence that Pelletier's action in the Collateral Loan case can be used against him in his campaign for re election. Postmaster William E. Murray is announced as a rival candidate and many think Murray's chances are bright.

Civil Service Commissioner Richard L. Curtis and Corporation Counsel John J. Stalling, were also named in the Republic. Mr. Fitzgerald's editorial said:

"It was a good job to expose the hypocrisy of Civil Service Commissioner Curtis. His arrogance that he has shown no favors to the Curley administration, as against the Fitzgerald administration, is ridiculous and every one knows it.

"One of the men whom he voted against when recommended by Mayor Fitzgerald were greatly superior to those submitted by Mayor Curley, who received his vote. Perhaps Mr. Curtis should not be blamed too much when A. Sullivan, now Mayor Curley's good corporation counsel at a salary of $5,000 a year, was the real civil service commissioner.

"Richard Lynch and other incompetents who are a burden to any administration were voted competent by Mrs. Curtis and his companions. What a Sorester Mr. Curtis has become."

CHARGE PANAMA LAND EXPOSE SUPPRESSED

and had been awarded "enormously larger amounts."

EXCESSIVE AWARDS CHARGED.

Chairman Adamson said that while on the infamous last November he had been told that one piece of land, which sold originally for $1,500, and later for $4,500, was finally valued at $350,000 by the commission and asked whether this was an authentic case.

"Yes," replied General Goethals, "and there were other cases. In that very same vicinity another piece of land has been valued at $4,000 a square meter and we are fighting it." This would be about $800 a square foot.

Goethals told of another instance where the United States had agreed to pay $5 a hectare for land bought in 1902 for $1 a hectare. The commission now has awarded $25 a hectare, he said. Through the operations of "amateurs," he said, the commission would pay several times for the same piece of land.

"And the Joint Land Commission is ignoring and treating the agreements that were made by the official agents as mere scraps of paper," asked Representative Sims.

"That is right, yes, sir," replied Goethals.

"And the treaty."

"Yes, sir."

CLAIMS SUPPRESSION OF FACTS.

General Goethals told the committee that his opinion that the Joint Land Commission had exceeded its authority and had violated laws and treaties had been set forth in a portion of his annual report, which was suppressed either by the War Department or the State Department. He agreed to submit the suppressed portion of the report to the committee.

"I am called before the committee for my views on the Joint Land Commission," he said, "and my conscience is clear."

General Goethals said that the Joint Land Commission was concluding at the time that its authority under the Panama treaty extended to the adjudication of all claims for damage against the United States by reason of the building of the canal. Such claims would give the commission jurisdiction over claims amounting to millions, it was declared.

At present there is only one American member of the Joint Land Commission, General Goethals said. This gives control of the body to Panamanians.

Lord Montagu, Wounded on Persia, Tells Story of Submarine Attack

Special War Service of the International News Service and London Times.

London, Feb. 12.—Lord Montagu of Beaulieu, upon his arrival at Southampton, badly wounded from injuries received when the Persia was sunk in the Mediterranean by a torpedo, gives to the International News Service and London Times, the following graphic statement:

By LORD MONTAGU.

I am really returning from the grave.

The voyage of the Persia was very uneventful until she was torpedoed, and everyone on board was very comfortable and happy as they neared home. About 11.10 a. m. on Thursday, December 30, as we were sitting down to lunch, there was a terrific explosion just abaft the main saloon. It blew out parts of the walls of the dining saloon, and the odor of acids in the torpedo at once told me what had happened.

The passengers, all of whom had previously been assigned to certain lifeboats, tried to reach their appointed stations. When I got to mine, which was in lifeboat No. 6, the ship was keeling over so badly that it was found impossible to launch any of the boats on that side. I climbed up with great difficulty to the starboard side, crying out to those on my secretary, Miss Thornton, who happened to be near.

SAW END OF BOAT.

Within three minutes after the torpedo struck the ship was on her beam ends, going down by the stern. I was swept off my feet by a rush of waters, and in a few seconds found myself in the ocean and under water. It seemed that I would never come up. At the great ship went down I was sucked along with it, striking my head a good many several times with great violence, either against parts of the ship or floating debris. I don't know which, but I had dropped down the companionway, and I was overwhelmed by the rush of waters and in the darkness.

I was a Gieve waistcoat, which has more buoyancy than an ordinary life preserver. Then, while I lost consciousness from blows on the head, something under me, my waistcoat promptly brought me to the surface. When I recovered my senses sufficiently to look around, I saw the sea was full of struggling human beings, very little wreckage and no sign of the Persia.

Only fifteen undamaged boats were left afloat, these only partly filled. I swam about fifty yards towards a boat floating upside down. Eventually I managed to scramble into it. She had a hole in her bottom so that she barely floated.

All the afternoon was spent in this precarious situation. Several times we were swept by great waves our of the boat, and I owe my life to Alexander Clark, a Scotch steerage passenger, who helped me to climb back into the boat once when I was so exhausted I could not have survived without aid.

The second night was very cold.

SHIP SUSPECTS RUSE.

We both found it a great struggle to keep awake. Just before dawn of the second morning we saw the black hull lights of a steamer far away to the starboard. At first thought it was a star. Presently I discerned her sidelights, which showed that she was coming nearly straight for us. When she got closer we started shouting in unison. I led the others by calling: "One, two, three, shout!" When the ship was half a mile away she turned her helm, stopped her engines and appeared to be lowering. We knew then that, like other ships, she suspected a ruse and dared not approach. After some time she came nearer. We heard a shout from her bridge. Then her steam whistle was blown. If you have ever known what it is to escape from the very jaws of death, you know how we felt.

The ship proved to be the Alfred Holt's steamer Nedg Chow, Captain Allen, bound from China for London. We had to be lifted on board like inert sacks, with ropes tied under our arms. On board we found nothing but kindness.

I have been asked by many how long I could have held out. I don't know. But I do know how I had determined when the end became clear to end my sufferings. I did not want to show weakness to fellow sufferers, but I had decided when I reached the limit of endurance secretly to let the ship go by. Then I would cast off my waistcoat and to slip quietly overboard and drown when the next big wave came.

GIRL "STOLEN" ON EVE OF HER MARRIAGE

were accompanied by Mrs. Mantrury Dyer of Fall River, who is my friend. My parents opposed my marriage to Jammen.

"We secured rooms when we arrived in Boston. Moses Nanez, whom I had known for some time, volunteered to assist us in getting a marriage license. He told Jammen to secure rooms in Columbus avenue as he said my father and two Fall River police officers were on their way to Boston.

"Jammen did this. I was then spirited away with Mrs. Dyer to a room in St. James avenue. Mrs. Dyer was later called on the telephone and told to return to Fall River, if I was forced to accompany Nanez to Hartford, Vt., Thursday. We were married there by a justice of the peace."

The police say that Thomas Joseph accompanied the couple to Hartford, Vt., and acted as interpreter. They also say Nanez stole $100 from Jammen.

GERMAN SHIP FIRED UPON IN DASH TO SEA

Rio Janeiro, Feb. 12.—The German S.S. Asuncion, interned at Para, requested permission to approach a wharf to take water aboard. Under cover of the night she turned about headed toward the sea. The Brazilian cruiser Republic and the auxiliary Tefe fired blank shots, and as the Asuncion did not stop, they fired on her with projectiles.

The German steamer then stopped and returned to the harbor. The captain later said that he had no intention of escaping. The local authorities have opened an investigation.

The German S.S. Asuncion, built at Hamburg in 1895, is of 4,683 gross tons and is 375 feet long and 46 feet beam. She is owned by the Hamburg South American Steamship Company of Hamburg, and had been reported as remaining voluntarily at Para.

EIGHT BILLION WAR COST TO ENGLAND

By International News Service.

London, Feb. 12. — The financial situation in England is causing anxiety in certain quarters, and the Times is taking the lead in a campaign for enforced economy, both on the part of the government and the people.

In spite of the immense increase in taxation the national debt has now risen to $6,500,000,000, and if the war continues another year it is estimated that the national debt in the meantime will have risen to $10,000,000,000.

At the present rate of expenditures the war will cost England eight billion during the present fiscal year, not counting the advances which must be made to her allies, particularly Italy and Russia. The burden of maintaining Serbia is falling upon the British government, and it is not a light one.

'LORIMER' FUGITIVE AGAIN

Dr. J. Grant Lyman, the million-dollar stock swindler, who left Boston last May after operating on State street as "John G. Lorimer" and living luxuriously a month at the Hotel Harvard on Huntington avenue, has come to light again—a few leaps ahead of the law, as usual.

A new mystery is now added to Lyman's sensational career over the identity of a young woman, described as the wife of a British army officer, who is now said to be involved in his affairs.

Lyman's latest getaway was staged in New York City. Dispatches from Manhattan today said that Lyman has been running a stock brokerage office in New York under the name of John H. Putnam and that he sailed Wednesday on the steamer Baltic for England.

The British army officer's wife, as she is described, is said to be waiting on the other side for Lyman with a year-old infant in her arms.

ASK BRITISH AID.

There is a federal warrant out in New York for the arrest of Putnam or Lyman or "Lorimer." The British authorities have been cabled to intercept him when the Baltic arrives, also to watch for the young woman in the case.

When Lyman was in Boston last Spring he posed as "C. A. Willis." A young woman who was with him was introduced by him at the Hotel Harvard as his wife. She was said, after they fled from here, to have resembled closely photographs of Miss Maud Lehman, a New York heiress, who had made a daring escape from the San Francisco police in 1911 he was said to have been aided by funds supplied by a Miss Lehman.

Lyman is said, to the course of his trial in California, that he was engaged to marry Miss Lehman, the latter sailed for Europe in September, 1911.

The New York dispatches say now that Lyman went to England just before the present war was declared and about three months later he returned to this country. The dispatches said that a British army officer's wife came back on the same boat.

The couple is said to have settled at Freeport, L. I., for the Fall of 1914. In January, 1915, a baby was born to this woman. The mother visited the St. Louis for Liverpool with her infant last May.

WOMAN OF MYSTERY.

Lyman and a young woman, as "Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Wills," came to Boston last April and were here about one month. At the Hotel Harvard "Mrs. Wills" made much of her child, which she said, was in England in care of a nurse.

Meanwhile Lyman was operating on State street as "Dr. John G. Lorimer," keeping the same suites as the "Lorimer" man had. The mail he received from Boston the last week in May.

The question now arises whether the "Mrs. Wills" who was here and talked of her child in England is the young woman, described as a British army officer's wife, who sailed from New York for Liverpool with a four-months' old baby last May.

The latest revelation about Lyman shows the same daring in New York that characterized him in Boston, both financially and socially.

As "John H. Putnam," with a brokerage office on Broad street, New York City, he is said to have cleaned up $400,000 in two months.

While police from Boston to Los Angeles were hunting for "Lyman," or "Lorimer," Putnam, now identified almost positively as the swindler of National Security and Panama Development Company fame, was living in New York, in the same royal style that Lorimer maintained a year ago in Boston and Brookline.

PLIED BOSTON IN JUNE.

Louis Thorner, who acted as man-by order of Assistant United States District Attorney Stanton on a charge of using interstate mail with Lyman's conspiracy to defraud investors by use of the mails.

So confident was this Putnam that he lived in the same hotel and rubbed elbows with William Offley, chief of the Bureau of Investigation of the Department of Justice in New York. In spite of his country-wide reputation, Putnam lived at the Irvington Grange Hotel, undisturbed. Chief Offley, as well as the people in the hotel, were most surprised to learn who the new Wallingford they had admired, really was.

HE STOLE FOR LOVE.

His identification was accomplished by Gotham "tuffs, a wealthy Los Angeles victim of Lyman's, who had been hunting New York for the promoter for several weeks. In the past five months Mr. Tuffs declared he had unearthed Lyman three times, each time notifying secret service men, only to be laughed at for his trouble. They were sure Lyman was in France in the trenches.

Only the failure of the J. H. Putnam Co., the New York stock brokerage firm, which had been collecting from customers on an average of $15,000 a day, and the disappearance of "Putnam" with $400,000 or so, his customers' mail order cash, stirred the Postoffice Department to action.

Then with the assistance of the indefatigable Tuffs, William J. Swain, secret service agent, made the identification of Putnam as the well known Dr. J. Grant Lyman. A photograph of Lyman was positively identified by "Putnam's" stenographer as a remarkable likeness of "Putnam." But Lyman or "Lorimer or Putnam had disappeared just two jumps ahead of a warrant for his arrest, just as he had been doing in the past.

It was last May that he fled from Boston, making good his escape while officers were actually hunting him with a warrant. He appeared in Boston for the last time on May 19, 1915. He became acquainted with Warren A. Brown, formerly secretary of the Boston Curb Exchange, and induced Brown to enter into partnership with him.

He was known to Brown as Dr. John G. Lorimer. The partners were to float a new stock issue. Under this name he managed to get away with $2,000 or so. Before he was compelled to flee he had engaged a suite in the Hotel Harvard in Huntington avenue, registering there with an attractive young woman as "C. A. Wills and wife," showing no little daring, the use of two names here in Boston.

LIVED WITH HEIRESS.

At the hotel, where "Wills" attracted attention by his lavish expenditures, guests and attaches recognized the young woman with him as Miss Maud Lehman, from the photograph of Miss Lehman. She was the "New York heiress to a million" to whom Lyman had announced he was married, previously, in California.

Dr. John Grant Lyman, a fine promoter, first attracted attention in Boston in 1911, when he victimized scores of New Englanders. Bostonians were the chief victims of "Lyman's" company, all backed and managed by "Dr. Lyman."

"Dr. Lyman" was afterward heard from in several parts of the United States, in Canada and in Mexico, but was finally placed under arrest by the Federal authorities in California in 1913.

His sensational escape from a hospital in Oakland, where he was taken after being injured in attempting to escape arrest in San Francisco, brought him again before the public. This episode involved the drugging of a nurse and a plot by which J. M. Thornet, a friend of Lyman, was employed as a nurse in the institution.

Lyman and Thornet, after the escape, were captured a week later in Oregon. But Lyman never completed the sentence imposed upon him at that time.

BOY INDICTED AS MURDERER OF BABY COUSIN

Harold Craft, the sixteen-year-old boy who killed his two-year-old cousin, Arline T. Kern, in her Roxbury home, was indicted for murder in the first degree by the Grand Jury.

The Grand Jury reported fifty-nine indictments and twenty-five no bills.

Craft lived at No. 14 Norfolk street, Roxbury. The Kern home is at No. 4 Stimson street, West Roxbury. On Friday, January 28, Mrs. Kern left her children in the care of Craft. When she returned, the two-year-old girl was unconscious, dying Saturday morning of concussion of the brain.

Craft disappeared, but after he had eluded an all-day search he entered the Winchester police station and gave himself up. He said he had hit the baby with a towel and with a stick.

An indictment charging murder on two counts was also returned against Adam Tarzein of Chelsea. He was a boarder at No. 110 Bay street, Chelsea. The police say he was in love with Mrs. Belle Ostrovick, his landlady, and that she repulsed him. He shot the woman and also her daughter Annie, when the latter started to run for help. He confessed, the police say, to both deeds. There are two murder charges against him in the indictment.

The grand jury also returned an indictment charging Paolo Condisporti with murder.

Roland Libbey of No. 47 Lexington street, East Boston, was indicted for manslaughter. Libbey when arrested was charged with murder. Harry E. Day, his friend, is the man for whose death it is claimed he is responsible.

Libbey has confessed, the police say, to breaking into the basement of the house where Day was sleeping and stealing the gas meter in the apartment. The escaping gas caused Day's death. Libbey took the meter to the cellar, the police say, and robbed it of the money it contained.

The man who as "Alexander Dupont of Wilmington, Delaware," victimized Boston hotels, tourist agencies and stores of about $1,700 by bad checks, posing meanwhile as a friend of Thomas W. Lawson, was indicted on charges of forgery and uttering and larceny.

He lived at the Hotel Lenox and left word at the desk: if Thomas W. Lawson calls, tell him I'm too busy to see him till tomorrow."

After his indictment he pleaded guilty and was held for sentence.

MIDDLESEX "DOG OFFICER" RESIGNS

James A Cutting, "dog officer" of Middlesex County, whose office had been a bone of contention in the last County Commissioner campaign, has resigned and the resignation has been accepted.

PLAN BIG GARMENT STRIKE

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Mrs. Inez Milholland Boissevain and other suffragists who are active in aid of striking garment workers in New York, planned today to make the strike nationwide, including Boston's 2,000 strikers, according to dispatches from New York. Philadelphia was expected to be hit by the strike today.

Samuel Gompers, as head of the American Federation of Labor, has promised to do all he can to help the striking girls. Fifteen thousand waiters and waitresses were expected to strike in New York today unless their demands were met.

In Boston police reserves were held in readiness in fear of trouble, following the disturbance near Washington and Dover streets last night, when four girl strikers were arrested.

The strikers, meanwhile, planned a demonstration this afternoon before Mayor Hagan. H. Perlstein, an official of the International Garment Workers, said that efforts have begun to organize a parade of 1,000 workers to City Hall, where a committee will call on Fox, the Acting Mayor. They will ask him to open the police lines now holding roughly with girl strikers. If the acting Mayor refuses to help them, Perlstein said, the strikers will march to the State House and appeal to the Governor.

The disturbance in Washington street reached the interest of a pitched battle before a detail of policemen, summoned from the East Dedham street station, arrived. The trouble started when the employes of the Bell Shirt Waist Company left the factory to run the gauntlet of strike-pickets.

PULLED HAIR IN FIGHT.

The belligerents yelled and screamed, pulled hair and fought till separated by policemen. One young woman, Mary Mahoney, was severely enough injured to be sent home with eyeglasses broken and her face cut.

Bessie McGill of Temple street was arrested, with Elsie Toy, on a charge of assault and battery. Rose Glassman of Ceylon street, Roxbury, and Jennie Borofsky of Intervale street, Roxbury, were arrested, charged with loitering.

Miss McCall had been released under bail of $500 in the Municipal Court only a short time before her second arrest. Miss Toy, with whom she was arrested, is employed at the union headquarters that the officers arresting her had assaulted.

STRIKERS CLAIM VICTORY.

At strike headquarters it was reported today the situation for the strikers was progressing most favorably, that the Dress and Waist Manufacturers' Association have signed their agreement and will reopen Monday with their former employes on the new scale.

Shops not yet signed up, leaders hoped, would be induced with less difficulty to sign, on account of the yielding of the association.

Notwithstanding, the police today prepared for more trouble. Extra strike-breakers and pickets and every precaution was taken to nip any disturbance in the bud.

COAL COSTS $7.05 OPERATORS SAY

By International News Service.

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—In a public statement issued today, anthracite operators give their side of the case in the controversy with the coal miners, over the latter's demand for a 20 per cent. increase in wages.

The statement is signed and issued by S. D. Warriner, chairman of the executive committee of anthracite producers, is signed also by the heads of the biggest hard coal companies.

It declares that the actual cost of mining a ton of hard coal and putting it on the market in New York City, which is the average consumption, is $7.05, not counting the 25 cents profit of the producing company. In other words, the average cost to the consumer per ton is $7.25. This is divided as follows:

Retailing cost, per ton—Rent of office and yard, lighterage, handling (at yards), breakage, cartage, administration expenses and retailers' profit, per ton, $2.11.

Transportation cost, per ton—Freight from Lehigh and Schuylkill regions to New York harbor, per ton, $1.55.

Production cost, per ton—Colliery labor (average), per ton, $1.80; materials of all kinds, royalty, taxes, depreciation of coal lands, outputting, administration expenses and accident indemnities, per ton, $2.10.

Losses on small sizes of coal sold at less than cost of production, per ton, 25 cents.

Operators' earnings available for return on investment averages per ton (on basis of U. S. Census showing less) 20 cents.

Total $7.25.

In conclusion the statement says that the anthracite industry as a whole is now conducted on as low a margin of profit as is possible if the operators are to continue to serve the public. Among other demands, the miners ask for an increase of 20 per cent. in wages. The cost of this one demand alone to the anthracite industry will be $23,000,000 annually, which is approximately twice the total profits made by the operators as stated in the latest report of the United States Bureau of Census."

LORIMER TO GO ON TRIAL THURSDAY

By International News Service.

Chicago, Feb. 12.—William Lorimer, president of the defunct La Salle Street Trust and Savings Bank, will be placed on trial Thursday on a charge of conspiracy to defraud.

This announcement was made by Judge Tuley when he ordered a special venire of 100 men to be drawn.

Cardinal Gibbons Calls for Moral and Instructive Films

Washington, Feb. 12.

CARDINAL GIBBONS indicates his views on moving pictures and their censorship in a letter to the International Reform Bureau, which is pushing a bill for federal censorship. The Cardinal wrote:

Whatever will make our American people better and therefore happier, I am, of course for.

Films and moving pictures have a wide, formative influence, and hence I should like to see them instructive and moral, at the same time entertaining and artistic.

To secure such we must both try to stop the flood of degrading pictures, and appeal to our people to demand good films.

Like food for the body that the government says must be pure, like correspondence in our mails, which the government has promised shall be decent and not obscene, so, too, the mental food, the correspondence that is carried daily into the minds and hearts of our rising generation through the moving picture parlors, should be wholesome and elevating.

Deputy Cain Buried With High Honors

Prominent city and police officials attended the funeral services of Deputy Superintendent of Police Laurence Cain at St. Hugh's church today. Deputy Cain died at his home, No. 22 Warrenton street, Roxbury, Wednesday, after a three weeks' illness. He was the senior officer men in the department.

A detail of forty-eight police duty acted as escort to the funeral cortege. They were in charge of Captain Patrick F. King, drill master of the department. Services were held at the home at 9:30 o'clock and a solemn high mass was celebrated at the church by Msgr. P. J. Supple. The Rev. John J. Cronin was deacon and the Rev. John F. Deignan was sub-deacon. After the services the escort preceded the cortege to Egleston Square, where the lines separated and allowed the funeral procession to pass between. Burial was at Holyhood cemetery, Brookline.

Among those who were present at the closing services were Police Commissioner Stephen O'Meara, Superintendent of Police Michael Crowley and former Superintendent William H. Pierce. The honorary pall bearers were Police Captains, and the active bearers consisted of six sergeants from different stations.

SAYS SCHWAB SEEKS NEW STEEL COMBINE

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 12.—C. M. Schwab, head of Bethlehem Steel Corporation, is in this city, and it is reported that this visit here is in connection with a plan to purchase control of the Pennsylvania Steel Company. It was reported that Mr. Schwab conferred with Mr. Donner, chairman of the Pennsylvania Steel Company, who owns 55 per cent. of the stock of that company. It was also reported that Mr. Schwab was to confer this week with Pennsylvania Railroad officials today.

On reports that negotiations were under way for a change of control of Pennsylvania Steel, the preferred stock jumped from 85 to 91 on the exchange here.

NINETEEN KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

Indiana, Pa., Feb. 12.—Nineteen men are dead, four men were injured, and 200 escaped as a result of poisonous fumes and three miners are missing, as the result of an explosion which swept the workings of Ernest Mine No. 2, of the Jefferson County Coal and Iron Company, at Ernest late yesterday.

The nineteen bodies, badly disfigured, lie in the mine office. Early tomorrow is to be prepared for burial. Officials of the company gave no explanation of the cause of the explosion this morning. The cause remains a mystery. Operators in the region are also puzzled.

DIES AFTER BEING FOUND ON STREET

A man, whom the police think is Joseph Forde and who was found unconscious late last night lying on the sidewalk on Compton street, near Tremont, in the South End, died early today at the City Hospital, ten hours later.

He was found by Patrolman Dempsey of the East Dedham Street Station. At the hospital he regained consciousness long enough to give his name to the surgeons and relapsed into unconsciousness again, from which he never rallied. The police say he is about thirty, five feet, ten inches, weighing 150 pounds. He is light complexioned.

The medical examiner is making an investigation into the cause of his death which is supposed to have been from natural causes.

$1,000,000 MONTHLY NEEDED FOR POLES

By International News Service.

Amsterdam, Feb. 12.—That $1,000,000 monthly will be needed to provide adequate relief for the inhabitants of Poland is the assertion in an article republished here from the North German Gazette, official organ of the Berlin government. It states that Messrs. Whitney and Walcott of the Belgian relief committee and the Rockefeller Institute, respectively, have completed an investigation and reported that smaller funds would not be adequate.

SPLIT OVER GARRISON WIDENS

By International News Service.

Washington, Feb. 12.—The resignation of Lindley M. Garrison gives promise of effecting two general results of far-reaching importance, in the opinion of a majority of the members of both the legislative and executive branches of the government. These two results may be stated to be:

First—Increasing factional disruption within the Democratic party.

Second—Crystallizing a common sentiment among hitherto irreconcilable coteries in the Republican ranks.

Administration supporters and administration critics alike were free in their acknowledgement of the fact that the Garrison resignation can be regarded as the crowning climax of a series of issues over which the President's control has brought him into disfavor with statesmen of his own party.

SUPPORT IS WANING.

Until today the situation politically could have been summarized in terms common to almost any administration. There was the usual majority, composed of the administration's supporters; the usual minority, with its usual partisan opposition to the administration, and the usual coteries of middle-of-the-road followers.

There is still a majority in Congress and a majority favors the President at whatever cost, but it is much less a majority than it was formerly.

The middle-of-the-road Congressmen have disappeared.

The reason for this change is not to be found in the resignation of Mr. Garrison, it is pointed out. That merely focussed opinions.

Opinions favoring and opposing the President's attitude have been drawn formerly through the disposition of other issues. The alignment, for and against the administration, must be said to be based on approval or disapproval of the President's course in the following issue:

The Philippines.
Great Britain's defiance of neutral rights on the seas.
The Mexican issue.
Preparedness.

To the ranks of opponents of the President on these issues there was added a not inappreciable number today in the resignation of Mr. Garrison controversy was not creditable.

The administration's supporters argue that the course adopted by Mr. Garrison was one to demand that the President exercise absolute domination over Congress and rob the legislative branch of virtually all power.

GOETHALS OR ROOSEVELT.

After a day, in which rumor ran rife in political and social circles crystallized into a firm conviction that President Wilson's choice of a successor to Lindley M. Garrison, as Secretary of War, is between two men.

These men are General George W. Goethals, Governor of the Canal Zone, and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Assistant Secretary of the Navy.

It was early established that the President is strongly opposed to appointing any man, however well fitted otherwise for the post, who has had previous experience in running a government department. The fact that Mr. Garrison, before he left, improved of the services of an experienced assistant secretary serves to emphasize the fact that executive departmental experience on the part of the new-comer, is a must.

Whether General Goethals will accept the position in the event of its being offered to him is considered by no doubt in view of his repeated statements that he would much prefer to finish the "Canal job" until it is in successful operation.

IS WELL TRAINED.

Assistant Secretary Roosevelt's record in the Navy Department is urged by his friends as the best proof of his ability to fill Mr. Garrison's shoes as Secretary of War. It must be said by his friends that his appointment would be welcomed with profound relief by all part of the War Department officials.

If the President does not confine his choice to these two men it is believed that he may make inter-cabinet changes that will result in placing the War Department in the hands of either Secretary of the Interior Lane or Secretary of Agriculture Houston.

Both Mr. Wilson, the President left Washington last night for a cruise down the bay on the Mayflower. The others are all for Sunday night or Monday morning.

NEW MOHICAN MARKET OPENED

The pure food movement has received added impetus in Boston through the opening of a market at Washington and Elm streets by the Mohican Company, which operates a chain of such establishments throughout the country. There is a bakery in connection with the market. The market fixtures are sanitary. The grocery department carries full lines of staple and fancy goods. The meat, dairy and fish departments of the market likewise carry complete stocks in their respective lines.

ORDER RELEASE OF APPAM PRISONERS

Washington, Feb. 12. — The State Department today ordered the release of the thirteen German prisoners aboard the prize ship Appam at Norfolk, Va.

Events Prove How President Wavers

THE important questions on which President Wilson and ex-Secretary Garrison failed to agree:

MEXICO

Garrison advocated a strong policy, including armed intervention.

President Wilson favored "watchful waiting."

THE PHILIPPINES

Garrison regarded the measure to give the Filipinos independence within four years as an "abandonment of the duty of this nation."

President Wilson declared it most inadvisable for him to indicate that he would dissent from the action of Congress in voting independence for the Filipinos.

THE TARIFF

Garrison stood for moderate protection.

President Wilson indorsed the Underwood bill of low tariff and no reciprocity.

PREPAREDNESS

Garrison insisted on the creation of a continental army of 400,000 men and did not include the State militia in his plan.

President Wilson, while at first for the Garrison ideas, later indicated that he was favorable to the plan for a federalized militia.

DECLARE ST. CYR HAS A RIGHT TO NAME

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 12.—In a statement issued by Attorney Stanchfield and Levy, they deny that Jean Harald Edward St. Cyr is "Jack" Thompson. In part, the statement says:

After several conferences with Mr. St. Cyr and his wife and an investigation extended over many days, we are firmly of the opinion that all statements that have been made in the newspapers or elsewhere, reflecting in any way upon the birth, antecedents or identity of Mr. St. Cyr are untrue and without the slightest foundation.

He is the child of his mother, he says, living with Deady at the Princeton, and gave him the name of Jean Harald Edward St. Cyr.

DISCARD SENTIMENT.

"Mother and I are now living with Uncle Hen."

The mother's petition avers "that it is a calamity for Richard, the child, to be brought up under such shameful conditions and subjected to such immoral influences, running the risk of ruining his character and having his entire future jeopardized.

"Your petitioner is anxious to procure his son's restoration from his present immoral, disgraceful and evil surroundings and bringing him up in decency, respect and happiness."

His request for custody of his son was accompanied by an affidavit from his present wife, in which she is willing to rear and educate Richard as if he were her own child.

Justice Cohalhan granted Dr. Busck an order calling upon his former wife to show cause next Wednesday why the petition should not be granted.

"Psycho-Analysis," Dr. Deady explained, "is the mental side of medicine. Psychology is the art of the false in life and love and make use of the real.

"There may be something unusual in my mode of living in the eyes of the uninitiated. But in the enlightened circle in which Mrs. Busck and I travel we are accepted as human beings." The couple motored to Atlantic City today.

SLEEPING SICKNESS VICTIM IS BETTER

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 12.—For the first time in six months Dr. Albert C. Peavel, the sleeping sickness victim, took a short walk. The fact that he was able to take any steps at all gives hope of his recovery, say his physicians. Twenty days ago Dr. Peavel's case was said to be hopeless.

TELLS OF 'PSYCHO' LOVE

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 12.—"I believe in monogamy, and am not against marriage. But I cannot see where the State and the church get their authority to interfere with love."

This statement, made by Dr. Henderson B. Deady, "psychoanalyst" and pupil of Karl Jung, explaining why Dr. Gunni J. Busck of Westfield, N. Y., is trying to get possession of his son, Richard, five, Richard lives in the apartment in the Poinciana, overlooking the Columbia University campus, where Dr. Deady resides. So also, Dr. Busck told the Supreme Court, does Mrs. Busck.

The relations of Deady and the Buscks are unusual. According to Dr. Busck's affidavit, they would have been still more unusual had he accepted Deady's suggestions.

Deady is the husband of Dr. Busck's sister, Amalie. Dr. Busck is a practicing physician at Westfield, in Chautauqua county, and is prosperous.

When he made the discovery that his wife and Deady were in love, he told the court, Deady said, "he did not see why they should raise any row about the matter—that I was all right—that he thought he, Charlotte H. Busck, the child, Richard, and myself, might just as well all live together."

LIVED TOGETHER.

"He said it would be an 'epochal event' for all parties to live together and thereby show their freedom and superiority to the senseless conventions of society. And Charlotte H. Busck expressed substantially the same views."

Dr. Busck's appetite for "epochal events" being practically nil at that time, he sued for and, in June, 1911, obtained a divorce. Custody of his son, then four years old, was awarded to Dr. Busck, his father, agreeing that he needed the mother's care.

After the separation, Dr. Busck and Mrs. Busck and Deady traveled in Europe together, and lived together in various places in New York and Connecticut.

Deady's return to this city was occasioned by his desire to mingle "in a large circle of friends" in sympathy with his views of life and not limited by slavish adherence to the "silly, old-fashioned ceremony." He gave three Columbia professors as references when he rented the apartment at Poinciana, where a circle of advanced students and radical professors of Columbia have attended his lectures on "Psycho-Analysis."

Dr. Busck married as his second wife Miss Flora Skinner of Westfield. They have two little girls. Last December he hunted up his son.

He found the boy with his mother, he says, living with Deady at the Poinciana. Deady gave him the news in these words:

M'CALL PRAISES THE SCOTCH-IRISH

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—At a banquet of the Pennsylvania Scotch-Irish Society Governor McCall of Massachusetts paid tribute to the Scotch-Irish declaring the hyphen means nothing when it comes to what the United States was concerned, but means they represent the best type of Americans. He spoke of the blending of races in this country, and said the Scotch-Irish were, next to the British, the very best immigrants.

DIRECTORS AGREE ON B.&M. REORGANIZATION

The most important development in the recent history of New England transportation occurred yesterday.

The directors of the Boston & Maine Railroad, the Fitchburg Railroad and the Boston & Lowell Railroad and the directors of most of the leased lines have agreed to recommend to their stockholders a form of reorganization which was recommended by Governor Walsh in his inaugural message last year. It was drawn by George W. Anderson as counsel for the Public Service Commission, approved by Louis D. Brandeis and progressive newspapers like the Boston AMERICAN, and the Attorney-General of the United States, under whose direction the New Haven was compelled to disorge the Boston & Maine.

This plan was overwhelmingly approved by the Legislature, which passed enabling legislation. It was made inoperative, however, by the non-concurrence of the New Hampshire Legislature. One of the constituents of the Boston & Maine system, that is, the Concord & Montreal was unwilling to accept the reorganization plan.

It would be more accurate to say a certain gentleman, influential in New Hampshire politics and very influential in the affairs of the Concord & Montreal; a gentleman who, in the investigation of railroad expenses before the Public Service Commission of New Hampshire, was discovered to have handled the "yellow dog" fund of the railroads in New Hampshire for a number of years and to have employed this fund in politics.

This gentleman used his thus accumulated political influence to block the best plan of re-organization that could be devised by the best railroad experts and public men of New England for reasons personal and local.

The stockholders of some of these leased lines were made to believe that a scheme was afloat under the powers of the re-organization plan to put them into a re-organized railroad corporation in a position very much less secure and less favorable than their rights and circumstances warranted.

SITUATION STILL PRECARIOUS.

Being under the influence of this gentleman, in New Hampshire and his immediate confederates, no argument was successful to modify their opposition. So the New Hampshire Legislature, seeing the doctors in disagreement, refused to approve the plan of re-organization.

But the situation of the Boston & Maine Railroad has finally forced the other leased lines to the course of action adopted today. As the board of directors of the Boston & Maine points out to its stockholders, the situation of the Boston & Maine is still precarious.

The earnings for the last six months have been exceedingly good, but grow out of temporary conditions, and the directors further admit that the favorable showing of the last six months was in part caused by deferring many necessary improvements which should have been charged to operating expenses.

The directors explain the postponement of these improvements by pointing out the uncertainties of the road's financial future. They say that very few, if any, railroads in the country with established financial credit are without a surplus equal or exceeding 75 per cent. of the net earnings. The surplus of the Boston & Maine are considerably less than this average.

CANNOT HIDE UNSOUNDNESS.

Its credit, the directors confess, has been destroyed "as a result of the last three years, which have so exposed the unsoundness of the road's financial structure that no improvement in earnings can hide it."

It is curious to observe how railroad gentlemen, even those who are not responsible for mismanagement, hate to admit that mismanagement is or can be responsible for the troubles of a railroad.

The directors of the Fitchburg, in a statement to their stockholders, employ circumlocution, very curiously to lead their stockholders to believe that the condition of the Boston & Maine was due not to mismanagement but to general railroad conditions throughout the country.

This is a good illustration of the view they take of the intelligence of their stockholders. They are, however, sufficiently chastened by the result of mismanagement to make a good recommendation to their stockholders in respect to their reorganization plan.

FIXED OBLIGATIONS IN LEASES.

The financial structure of the Boston & Maine is still unsound, almost $150,000,000 of indebtedness resting on $48,000,000 of stock, thus making what is known in the financial world as a pyramid and having the uncertainty of a pyramid standing on its apex with its base in the air.

The obligations to the leased lines are fixed and must be met in the bad years as well as in the good to avoid bankruptcy and receivership. This no doubt hinders the credit, the directors point out, that the railroad is unable to obtain money at reasonable cost to do its business economically.

It needs new engine terminals, modern freight yards, sidings and third and fourth tracks, "for expediting road movements and avoiding expensive delays," new bridges and modern locomotives "capable of hauling greater tonnage at lower unit cost."

"All these," say the directors, "must be provided if the road is to be put on a secure dividend-paying basis."

The directors point out that in fifteen years the business of the road has increased over 50 per cent., but this business has not been economically handled, as that the net revenue from the business has always been unsatisfactory.

REDUCED FIXED CHARGES.

The consolidation of the three lines, the Boston & Maine, the Fitchburg and the Boston & Lowell line, by which the rentals of the Boston & Lowell and the Fitchburg are to be converted into a contingent liability such as the preferred stocks provided for in the re-organization plan by substituting a preferred stock for the floating debt, "would reduce the capital obligations on which there are fixed charges approximately $16,000,000, and add $10,000,000 to the financial foundation in the form of stock, thereby reducing the fixed charges by approximately $2,500,000 a year."

In other words, the debt would be taken from the top and put at the bottom, and the pyramid which is now standing on its apex would be put back on its base and could weather the storms of the bad years.

The agreement for re-organization does not attempt to shut out the New Hampshire members of the Boston & Maine system. It is proposed to leave the plan open a short period, during which the New Hampshire interests may advise with each other as to their participation.

FOR SOUND RECONSTRUCTION.

Without the Concord & Montreal and the New Hampshire interests, the essential part of the Boston & Maine system would still be intact. The business in the west could be reached by the Fitchburg and the heavy manufacturing districts would be tapped by the other older parts of the system.

The system would in its efficiency be practically the old Boston & Maine system, soundly reconstructed along the lines adopted in 1900, last year, which met the approval of "all disinterested and well-informed minds of New England."

The agreement of the leased lines to enter into this reorganization will probably be a pleasant surprise to the people of New England.

It appears from some of the statements to the stockholders that not only the directors but many of the largest individual stockholders of the system are also in accord with the new development. They are extremely important to modern New England, which so much needs a rehabilitated Boston & Maine system.

2,000 STRIKE FOR HOLIDAY PAY

Bridgeport, Ct., Feb. 12.—Nearly all the employes of the American Graphophone Company, numbering about 2,000, are on strike today. They demanded double pay for Lincoln's birthday work, in accordance with the agreement of last year. The strike was on last September, but this demand has been refused, and as a result the directors have handed in the big plant.

Yesterday morning a sign was posted, signed by Manager Hanson, that the company would not regard Lincoln and Washington Birthdays as holidays.

AGED FARMER AND HOUSEKEEPER SLAIN

Plainfield, N. J., Feb. 12.—Richard Sydloff, an aged farmer, and his housekeeper, Katherine Fisher, were found murdered in their home on Sorland mountain ridge today. The man's head had been crushed with an axe and the woman's throat had been cut. Robbery is believed to have been the motive.

Cardinal Sees Ladies' Catholic Club Pageant

At top—Miss Josephine Cunniff. At bottom—Miss Marie Pugh.

Under the auspices of the Ladies' Catholic Club Association an elaborate pageant, "Yesterday and Today," was presented at the Boston Opera House before an audience of 3000 persons.

The proceeds will be used by the association in its South End settlement work. The cast included 300 young people of Boston and vicinity and the program comprised eleven episodes.

Among those who occupied boxes were Cardinal O'Connell, who was escorted into the building by a guard of honor.

Among the young women who appeared in leading roles were Miss Josephine Cunniff and Miss Marie Pugh.

The affair was staged under the direction of Ray W. Aspell. The music was directed by Miss Mary A. Barr, of St. Mary's Church, Endicott street, the president of the club.

A full page of pictures of those taking part in the pageant will appear in tomorrow's sunday AMERICAN.

DAIRYMEN TO FIGHT LEASED CAR PLAN

Worcester, Feb. 12.—The Massachusetts Dairymen's Association is to make a fight against the so-called leased car system before the Interstate Commerce Commission at its hearing in Boston next Thursday. The dairymen claim that under the leased car system milk can be transported to Boston from Maine and Vermont just as cheaply as from a distance of forty or fifty miles. This, they claim, is hurting the cattle raising industry in Massachusetts.

President Burton W. Potter of Worcester, Professor William R. P. Lockwood, of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, and Warren C. Jewett, also of Worcester, represent the association at the hearing.

HOUSE BLOWN UP; TWO ARE HURT

Newcastle, Pa., Feb. 12.—Six hundred pounds of powder exploded in a dry house at the properties plant of the Bethlehem Steel Company, near here, injuring two workmen and completely wrecking the building. The cause of the explosion is unknown.

Several nearby structures were damaged slightly.

The force of the blast was terrific and was felt for miles around.

BOY DYING FROM COASTING HURTS

Gloucester, Feb. 12.—Stanley Patience, 10, of Parker street, will probably die as a result of injuries sustained when the sled on which he was sliding down Punt Hill collided with an auto truck. The boy's ribs were crushed and at the Addison Gilbert Hospital it is said that he has little chance of recovery.

PETROVITCH, NOBEL PRIZE WINNER, DIES

Petrograd, Feb. 12.—The death is announced of the famous surgeon Ivan Pavloff Petrovitch, aged sixty-seven years. Physiology of the heart was the special subject of his research. He was awarded the Nobel prize for medicine in 1904.

NAVAL MILITIA MAN HAS TRIAL HALTED

A hearing was to be held today before Judge Loring of the Supreme Court on the petition for a writ of prohibition brought by Lieutenant Commander Charles A. MacDonald, Fall River, of the Naval Brigade, against the court sitting in the court-martial against him.

The court-martial proceedings opened in Mechanics Building February 7. Judge Loring has issued a restraining order halting the trial until after the hearing today.

MacDonald claims that the court is illegal, as Lieutenant Commanders Albert H. Baker and Howard C. Copeland were appointed instead of elected, as called by the State constitution. MacDonald is accused of disobedience.

UNEARTH PLOT TO WRECK BIG LYNN PLANT

That German secret agents, operating from their Boston headquarters, had planned to destroy the River works of the General Electric Company at Lynn, was the disclosure made today in the government's investigation of the so-called German spy-plot here.

The destruction of the Lynn plant, it is said, was to have quickly followed the dynamiting of the New England Chemical Works at Woburn.

The Woburn plant, according to recent disclosures, had been marked for destruction the night of February 16.

Find Heiress Who Fled With Her Chauffeur

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 11.—Miss Grace McLaughlin, the $250,000 heiress believed to have eloped with George M. Stevens, her chauffeur, is in Savannah, Ga., the police here are informed.

This brief message has been received by police headquarters here:

"Shall we detain Miss Grace McLaughlin for New York authorities?"

The telegram was signed by the sheriff at Savannah.

Mrs. Ingles hesitated to order her niece held, inasmuch as she is twenty-six years old, and mistress of her own affairs. She probably will not decide until she has consulted her attorneys.

To spur the search for Stevens, the missing chauffeur, Mrs. Ingles has offered a reward of $1,000 for his conviction as a bigamist.

N. H. EMBARGO ON FREIGHT IS MODIFIED

The New Haven railroad's eastward freight embargo has been further modified by an order which reads as follows:

"All carload and less-than-carload freight destined to points on the New York, New Haven & Hartford and Central New England railways, except via Beacon, N. Y., will be accepted."

This completely removed, so far as the New Haven could control them, all restrictions against acceptance of all classes of freight originating west of the Hudson River for New Haven and Central New England railway stations, except through Beacon, N. Y. There is still an accumulation of freight at Beacon.

CAPTAIN KILLED, RESCUE 3 IN SLOOP WRECK

Portland, Me., Feb. 12.—The fishing schooner Bernie and Bessie arrived in port here today with three survivors of the fishing sloop Nellie F. Wotton, which sank last Thursday about four miles off Cape Elizabeth after an explosion of a gasoline tank, which caused the death of Captain Loat Wallace of the ill-fated fishing boat.

The Career of Katherine Bush

The new love story by

Elinor Glyn

"Three Weeks" hadn't been out a month when the whole world sat up and rubbed its eyes and gasped!

Here was a story of the love of a woman that differed from all other love stories—because it told the whole truth.

And told it literally.

When the world reads "The Career of Katherine Bush," the new story by Elinor Glyn, who wrote "Three Weeks"—it will gasp again. For in the story of this girl-woman you are reading what might have happened to you.

Except—that you might not have run away to Paris with Lord Algy (as she did) unless he had been your husband.

Or—you might have married him afterwards when he begged you to (as she did not).

Very probably you would have thought it altogether a biggish price to pay—just to learn how the upper-upper classes in England eat oysters, and that they take a bath every day.

Maybe you are so sure she was wrong to have gone at all that you think the whole episode was a ghastly, tragic mistake.

Most people do think so.

Katherine thought it a step.

But there are those who believe the moral tone of England is partly to blame for much that is happening there today—as the morals of Rome ruined an empire centuries ago.

If you dare to look life in the face as it is, you will be glad you read "The Career of Katherine Bush"—

And—

The story starts being a story from the very first word—

Harvard's Oldest Alumnus Is Now Chicagoan of 92

Samuel Sewall Greele of Chicago is now Harvard's oldest alumnus through the death of Dr. James L. Wellington of Swansea, aged ninety-eight.

Greeley was graduated from Harvard with the class of 1841. He came of old New Hampshire stock and is now in his 92d year. He was active in the Commencement exercises at Harvard two years ago.

He came from Chicago to observe his seventieth Commencement anniversary, led the big parade in the Harvard-Yale baseball game, occupied a place at the high table on Commencement Day, and made a speech at another festivity.

After visiting relatives Greeley returned to Chicago, prophesying that he would be back in five years to celebrate again.

PLENTY OF THRILLS WITHOUT DAMAGE

Milford, N. H., Feb. 12.—Joseph Blood's sleighing team holds the runaway record. Joe has a pung and pair. He brought the Melrose, Mass., High School hockey players back from Mt. Vernon School to Milford Depot at night. The hockey players got out. Two little girls climbed aboard for a free ride. Joe went in the drugstore a minute. The horses bolted, ran two miles east, turned around, spilled out the two girls, without hurting them, then came back, still running. Joe was unable to catch them as they sped by the depot. He followed in an auto. They ran to Mt. Vernon and beyond, a total distance of seventeen miles before they were winded. No damage.

PLAN MEMORIAL ON HARVARD BRIDGE

To make Harvard Bridge the hub of Boston is the aim of an architectural plan by Ellen F. Cumins, as the chief detail in the commemoration of the 200th anniversary of the landing of the Pilgrims, December 21, 1620.

The proposition is to construct a the middle of Harvard Bridge area, which will form the base for permanent memorial building and symbolic memorial surrounded by decorative grounds. The memorial building is to contain a convention hall with a capacity of 4,000 persons.

Hard-Boiled Eggs Kick Call "Tex" Interloper

By DAMON RUNYON.

THERE was a meeting of the Home Guards the night after the articles of agreement for the Willard-Moran match were signed.

All the boys were there, and much indignation prevailed.

"It's gettin' so a man's better off in this town if he's a stranger," declared the tall fellow in the tan shoes. "Thass what it is! He's better off if nobody don't know him! It's gettin' so guys kin come in here from the outside and start doin' things right away without askin' nobody. What chance has a good guy got around here nowadays?"

"He ain't got a Chinaman's chance," said the fat man with the three chins.

"To think o' Tex Rickard and all them other strangers steppin' in and grabbin' all that sugar! A bunch o' mugs, too! I wudden mind if they was smart guys, but they're a bunch o' mugs. It's outrage! Sometimes I get so sore I've got haffah mind to move away from here. I'd go to Nor Leens if I had the price, thass what I'd do! It's a outrage!"

AFTER A BLOW-OFF STAKE.

"Thass what it is—a outrage," agreed the aggressive looking little fellow with the hat on the side of his head. "Strangers kin do anything in New York now, but if bet I git declared in on the deal I'll soon start somepin'. They got to let me in!"

"Yes, sir!" said the fat man, waxing apoplectic, "I'm a old-timer, and I go so com'ers else if I had the price. I'm getting sick of the way things is done around here."

"I'd go somepin's myself, too, if I had the dough," said the tall fellow. "I bin tryin' to git a blow-take together for some time, but I don't seem able to git started good. I don't get the breaks, somehow. I bin a good guy around this town, too, ain't I, boys? You know I have. I bin here for years spendin' my dough when I had it, and lookit me now! I ain't got nothin', and here a mob o' mugs come in and take all that gravy. It aint right!"

HOME GUARD TO ORGANIZE.

"You bet it aint right," said the fat man. "What we ought to have here is an organization to protect ourselves against them outsiders. Lookit me! Everybody in this town knows me, but I can't git goin," neither. I've just barely had position money since the first o' the month."

"Whudduh you mean, position money?" demanded the man with the scar on his nose, who had been listening silently to the discussion.

"Well, I mean a nickel to buy a glass o' beer som'ers where you can git a good position to set down and wait for a live one," replied the fat man, eyeing the scarred gentleman in surprise.

"We ought to have an organization, all right," assented the aggressive looking little man. "I'm for that. If we had an organization, we could keep strangers from gettin' anything in this town. But we have been gyp'ed in the past, and he told me he believes the way I will."

"I was waitin' outside to see if I cudden make somebody for an Annie Oakley in front o' the theayter, and I walked right up and sat him whud he thought. He's a cheap stiff at that, thought. He didden offer to treat me in to see Dillon paste that bird o' Morgan's."

"I hope the newspapers bawl 'em out good," said the tall fellow. "I bin watchin' them to see whud they was gonnah say about it, and I wouldden be surprised if som-pin' come off."

HE IS, SIRE!

"I'm in—don't overlook that," asserted the little man, emphatically. "I'm in on this thing som'ers. You mark whud I tell you."

"Why don't somebody go see the guv'nuh?" demanded the fat man. "Why don't somone put it right up to him and ast him where these strangers git off to come into the town and pick up a good thing like that? I think the guv'nuh oughtah perfect the people whut live in this town. I'd go see him myself, but I can't be ramblin' up to Albany at my own expense. I'd go in a minute if somebody would shake me."

"I'm in, boys! Just remember that," said the little man, wagging his head in a threatening manner.

"I was up to the Claridge to see them signin' the artickles o' agreement," said the man with the scar on his nose, gloomily. "They was all strangers there to-me, 'cept a few o' the newspaper boys and one or two others. Nobody give me a tumble. Fellah, I felt a right stranger. It's a dirty shame that people like that kin come in here and make money when good guys is starvin' to death."

MAKING MARK OF TEX.

"What a sucker they're makin' of that guy Tex Rickard," mused the tall fellow. "They're takin' him like Grant took Richmond. Well, I'll serve him right. If he duit come around and ast me for people somp'in' he might know somp'in' about, I'll tell him nothin' nor. They say he's gottah million, but I don't believe it."

"A million!" remarked the fat man, scornfully. "Not in a thousand years. I bet Rickard'll have a hard time raisin' much over haffah million right here. He's a sucker, Rickard is, wudden lift a finger to help him."

"Well, I guess he's a pretty good spender, at that, ain't he?" queried the tall fellow.

"A good spender," said the fat man. "Who Rickard? Say, do you know whud he done to me once? I sat him to slip me a piece o' money one day down at the Walnut, and he handed me five! A fiver! Thass all! What do you think o' that? Do you call him a spender?

ONLY SLIPPED A FINNIF.

"How long have you knowed him?" asked the tall fellow, sympathetically.

"I ain't knowed him a-tall," replied the fat man, indignantly. "Whud difference does that make? Whudden you think a guy with all the sugar they say he's got would kick in stronger than a finnif?"

"Well, sure," said the tall man, "that proved whud kind o' people these outsiders is. They don't know nothin' and they don't never learn."

"Don't forget for a second whud I tell you about Tex Rickard," said the little man. "I'm in. Here's how! They don't keep out. When they cut that pie I'll git mine. I'm gonnah go see Rickard now, and if they don't gimme a job at one o' the gates or somp'in' I'll make some trouble for 'em. I will."

"Say," said the fat man, earnestly, "ast Tex if he ain't gonnah need a good man to look after the fighters' dressin' rooms, will you? Tell him you had plenty experience, and won't cost him much. Say, don't forget to ast Tex will you?"

MRS. LANCASTER ON BILL WITH MRS. HURD

Pinehurst, N. C., Feb. 12.—Mrs. J. V. Hurd of Pittsburgh, the former international champion, and Miss Elinor Gates of Locust Valley, meet today in the first division finals in the St. Valentine's golf tournament. Mrs. C. S. Lancaster, Woodland, meets Mrs. H. H. Vanderf, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., in the finals in the fourth division.

N. Y. BOOKING FOR CAMPI.

New York, Feb. 12.—Eddie Campi of California and "Kid" Sullivan of Brooklyn will trade wallops in the ten-round semi-final to the Ted (Kid) Lewis-Jack Britton bout at the Broadway Sporting Club next Tuesday night.

MURCHIE GREEN'S HERO.

Hanover, N. H., Feb. 12.—It took Dartmouth an overtime period to dispose of the Bishop's College seven of Quebec, 3-2. Murchie, who shot the winning goal, also counted the winning tally.

THE RABBITS' COLUMN

By Walter J. Maranville
SHORTSTOP OF THE BRAVES

I had a great time at Brockton last night, running over from Springfield to attend the meeting of the high school boys. They certainly treated me out of sight. I tried hard to be excused from talking, but they insisted that I make some remarks. I don't know exactly what I said, but I guess I hit 400 as the boys certainly gave me the glad hand when I got through. The concert was a corker. Say, Miss Hazel Wing can certainly play the piano and Milton Smith is a bear with the violin. Then Miss Theresa Sprague and Miss Elva Boyden are good enough singers to get on big time. I all wound up with a sketch by the High School Dramatic Club and the boys and girls did themselves proud.

Quite a few ball players are in the South beginning their preliminary training for the big struggle. It speaks well for their enthusiasm.

Each day seems to bring encouragement for the supporters of the Braves. The weak spots are being gradually strengthened. If the club can land a catcher it will be about right. I frankly admit that the race will be a tough one, and while the club doesn't look any too strong it will be there fighting all the way. The pennant decided in 1914 can be revived, which with our crack pitching should carry the Braves through.

Johnny Evers' condition at this moment is all that could be desired. It looks as if he was to be in perfect form for the work. That is one of the best news items of the season so far as the Braves are concerned.

* * *

I don't know how far Manager Stallings would have gone to get "Chief" Meyers, but that is out of the question now. The Indian will be seen in Brooklyn along with Marquard. This "discard battery" may give the Giants plenty of trouble.

* * *

This season's Spring training will bear a lot of Joe Wood. For the first time in his career "Smoky" finds it necessary to show up early in order that he is there. You remember President Lannin's remarks a year or so ago, that Joe would have to be in shape or it would be just as well not to report.

* * *

Before many days the situation in the International League is likely to clear. Just now Newark is bare, with a strong chance that outside capital will own the club in fact as it does. Jim Price should make a capable and popular president.

* * *

Hiram Brewer, newspaperman, diplomat of Federal League training, returns to his native city as owner of the New England League baseball team. He will put plenty of life into that organization and his following will be great. Worcester has been a fine ball town and can be built up through the endorsement of this "native son."

* * *

Why mention the size of Benny Kauff's hat? When he comes here with the Giants he will need a hat. If he should happen to have one he will be forced to fight it in his hand. The crowds anywhere will revenge him and their long, loud and continued cheering will force Benny to remain uncovered.

* * *

Speaking of Kauff—will it not be a pity if New York and Detroit do not fight it out for the World's title?

ENGLISH HIGH HAS A VERY CLOSE CALL

Lawrence, Feb. 12.—Boston English High's track team won the dual meet from Lawrence High, 24½-23½. Hanson of the visitors was disqualified for knocking Goodner, the winner, down at the tape. Higgins covered the 300-yard run in 37 3-5.

CRANE MAKING BID FOR TUXEDO TITLE

Tuxedo, N. Y., Feb. 12.—Joshua Crane of Boston, will be a competitor in the semi-finals in the gold racquet championship tournament here today. He plays J. C. Waterbury of New York, while C. C. Pell and S. G. Mortimer, two Tuxedo players, clash.

Officers Chosen and Dates Awarded

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 12.—The American Lawn Tennis Association held its annual banquet and meeting at the Waldorf-Astoria last night. It was the mildest meeting in some years.

The amateur standing of Maurice E. McLoughlin and Thomas C. Bundy, the California whirlwind, was not discussed. Tonight it is pretty well understood they are to lose their amateur rating.

The West Side Tennis Club was again awarded the national open single tournament, the challenge round of the national championship doubles and the national interscholastic singles.

George Adee of the Country Club of Worcester succeeded Robert D. Wrenn as President of the association.

At Hosking of Philadelphia was re-elected Vice-President and H. Ferrecy of Troy, N. Y., was re-elected secretary. The financial report showed there is over $37,000 in cash to the credit of the national body.

The national clay court championships was awarded to Cleveland.

The question of amateurism will be discussed by the executive committee March 17.

President Wrenn reported for the Davis cup committee that because of the European war no challenge would be sent abroad.

EXETER VS. ANDOVER ON PLIMPTON FIELD

Exeter, N. H., Feb. 12.—This afternoon on the Plimpton Field rink Exeter and Andover will clash in their annual holiday game. The teams are evenly matched, although Exeter is greatly handicapped by the severe illness of "Buck" Colt, the star right wing. The teams will line up as follows:

ANDOVER.		EXETER
Waters, g.	g.	Nichols
Parlow, c.p.	c.p.	Colt
Hubbard, l.w.	l.w.	Suter
Bonbright, r.w.	r.w.	Hollingsworth
Wanamaker, r.	r.	Martin
Allen, r.w.	r.w.	Ayer

BADGER NINE MUST PAY OWN EXPENSES

Madison, Wis., Feb. 12.—The University of Wisconsin faculty has ruled against the expenditure of its athletic funds for any spring training trip of the varsity baseball team and ordered the management to cancel dates at De Pauw and Notre Dame. The faculty has been consistently against intercollegiate baseball, but has not forbid the sport entirely.

SIX-DAY BIKE GAME HIT WITH 'PACKEY'

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 12.—Mike Boyle and "Packey" McFarland, six-day bike race promoters, finished here today with eight teams of riders. They will stage a six-day race, beginning next Saturday night. The contestants will ride eight hours a day.

SET-UP FOR STECHER.

'Chief' Bender Is Signed by Moran for the Phillies

By International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 12.—"Chief" Bender, former star pitcher of the Athletics, has accepted terms offered by Manager Pat Moran of the Phillies and will sign a contract in time to go South with the team on its Spring training trip. The deal will be ratified by President Baker, it is announced.

Bender and Moran met yesterday afternoon at a hotel in this city and closed the deal, after which Moran left for his home at Fitchburg, Mass., where he will remain until his departure for St. Petersburg, Fla., for Spring training.

BROWNS NOW RATED AS $400,000 PLANT

St. Louis, Feb. 12.—The St. Louis (American League) club has increased its capital stock from $80,000 to $400,000. The stockholders are listed as follows: Phil Ball, 2,530 shares; Otto F. Stifel, 735 shares; James W. Garneau, 199 shares; J. R. von Weise and S. L. Swaris, four shares each.

ROACH OF THE FEDS IS NOW A COLONEL

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 12.— Roxey Roach, infielder of the Buffalo Feds, has been purchased by the Louisville (American Association) club. He batted .270 in 92 games with the "outlaws" last season.

Curley Talks to Jones Willard Ill in Chicago

mitted that quite a number of words, not all of them friendly, had passed between Jones and himself. It seems that Willard's manager met the promoter a certain hotel late yesterday.

The name of the hostelry Rickard preferred to keep out of the story, because of incidents which followed. During the course of the conversation Jones asked what Rickard and McCracken expected to charge for seats.

"I expect and hope," returned Rickard, "to keep the prices from $3 to $25, but it is just possible we will charge $50 a seat for the first two rows of ringside boxes, nearly all of which are now engaged by people to whom cost in this instance is of little object."

"NO $50 seats," says Jones.

"No $50 seats," says Jones.

"You can't charge $50 a seat for that fight while I am managing Willard," Jones is reported to have said, adding, "you agreed when we made the match that you would not charge more than $25 a seat."

"He looked me right in the eye," said Rickard in telling the story, "and had the nerve to tell me that I had agreed to charge no more than $25. He knew that was a lie, and I told him so. I never made any such statement with anybody, although "I said then, and still say, that we hope to be able to hold the highest price seats down to that figure. All that, however, will have to be settled in a day or so, when we complete our arrangements for the seating."

The promoter pointed out to Jones that he had no right to try and dictate in such a matter as the fixing of prices.

Jones was inclined to argue this. Both men, it was reported, lost considerable composure during the course of the discussion and Jones took his leave vowing dire things. It was said at the hotel where the entertainment was staged that the former fighter spoke in distressingly loud tones, and evinced such a desire to mix things at this occupation indefinitely that he will not be over welcome at the hostelry again. Rickard, however, had nothing to say on this point, contenting himself with the bare statement anent the argument itself.

JONES SAYS "FIGHT'S OFF."

Jack Curley later sought the promoter and told him that everything had been fixed up, and that Willard's mentor was resting comfortably despite the "slight" annoyance. This soothing statement was smashed, however, when Tom Jones himself was later located at Considine's cafe. Willard's manager expressed himself forcefully to the effect that as far as he was concerned the fight was off.

A reporter questioned Jones as to whether he would actually call the fight off if Rickard decided to charge $50 a seat for the ringside boxes.

"I certainly will," said big Jess' manager. "There is no ten-round fight worth $50 a seat, and I'm not going to stand for it. And what I say goes, too! I'm Willard's manager, and Willard's only manager." Rickard agreed out in Chicago that his top price would be $25, and if it came to a fight, the fight's off."

"Rickard says that he never told you that," Jones was told.

"Then he's a liar," rejoined the ex-barber promptly and with vigor.

Lake Cayuga to Be Scene of Big Regatta

New York, Feb. 12.—Morton H. Bogue, chairman of the intercollegiate regatta committee, announced today that it was very likely the big race this year would be rowed on Lake Cayuga at Ithaca, N. Y., instead of on the Hudson at Poughkeepsie. The date probably will be Saturday, June 24, and the distance will be shortened to three and one-fourth miles, in case the race is rowed at Ithaca. That is the longest stretch of rowing water in the lake.

"It is impossible for us to hold the race on Saturday, June 17, the first date considered," said Bogue. "That date conflicts with the Pennsylvania examinations. Saturday, June 24, the tidal conditions in the Hudson are against the staging of the race. We wanted to hold it on the Hudson Friday, June 30, or Saturday, July 1, but the railroads have refused to give us cars, claiming all their extra equipment will be in use for Fourth of July excursions. The same thing is true with the steamboat people, who always carry thousands to the race.

"Because of the state of affairs, we are looking elsewhere for a place to hold the race and right now we are inclined toward Ithaca. We will decide this carefully within a few days."

DARTMOUTH AT BUFFALO.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 12—Dartmouth's relay team competes at tonight's Seventy-fourth Armory A. A. indoor meet. Coach Harry Hillman believes that Riley, Jaggy Worthington and Trenholm go to make up the best team in the Green's history.

J. LOOMIS BOWS TO DREW

Dusky Flyer Equals Two World's Records in New York—Joie Ray Loses Willie Gordon.

By International News Service.

NEW YORK, Feb. 12.—Howard P. Drew, the dusky flyer of the University of Southern California, equalled two world's records at the Fordham University games at the Twenty-second Regiment Armory last night. Incidentally, he took the measure of Roy H. Morse, Salem Crescent A. C., and Joe Loomis, Chicago A. A., who finished second and third, respectively. This is the third consecutive time within two weeks these athletes have finished in the order named in sprint races held in New York.

Last night they competed in a special 30-yard scratch race and were the only contestants. The trio stood from the mark on a mill. Drew flashed in the lead, but Morse hung to him like a leech, with Loomis inches in the wake of the latter. So they ran up to the last twenty yards, when Drew began to widen the space and finished one yard and one-half ahead of Morse.

DREW TIES TWO MARKS.

Drew did not stop here, but kept on in an endeavor to lower the world's figures for 100 yards. The best he could do was to equal two world's records. His time for the 90 yard was 9 1-5 seconds, and for the longer route 10 2-5 seconds.

Three champions garnered the prizes in the one-mile walk, handicap, at the Twenty-second Regiment. Joe Pearlman, New York A. C., the junior metropolitan champion, was aided in winning by a 10-second allotment. Dick Remer, scratched, who started three seconds after him, finished two yards behind, and Eddie Rena, Mohawk A. C., was third.

Frank L. Stephenson, Trinity Club, former junior national champion, won the 100-yard dash from scratch. He was victor by a margin of five yards over D. Rickards, Columbia University, who was favored with a seven-yard lead.

COLUMBIA'S PAST RELAY.

The one-mile college relay brought together Columbia, Fordham and City College of New York. Columbia won as it pleased, Fordham got start to finish. Its time was exceptionally good—3 minutes 29 3-5 seconds.

Although he could not beat Drew and Morse in sprinting, Loomis found somebody to beat when it came to a 600-yard race. He matched his speed against Jack J. Eller, Irish-American A. C., one of the greatest 1000-yard runners in the world, and Arthur L. Engles, New York A. C., the new junior national champion at 1000 yards. Loomis led from start to finish, cracking the tape winner by two yards. The time was 1:16.

JOIE RAY FINDS HIMSELF.

The one-mile special was a triangular affair between Joie Ray, Pelham A. C., of which he is captain; New York A. C., and Sid Leslie, Long Island A. C. The former ran a different race than he did at the New York A. C. games and won handily.

For the first half of the distance Ray took turns setting the pace with Leslie, and the latter lead up to the three-quarters mark.

Entering the last two furlongs, Ray lengthened his stride and reached the lead from Leslie. He sprinted the balance of the distance and won by 35 yards. His time was 4:27 1-5, about ten seconds faster than the Baxter mile was negotiated.

DEVERE STOPPED IN 3RD BY ANDERSON

By International News Service.

New York, Feb. 12.—Ted Anderson, the husky heavyweight, stopped Bob Devere in three rounds at the Harlem Casino last night. It was Anderson's third knockout since he opened here a few days ago. Jimmie Johnston's stable along with Ted (Kid) Lewis.

A great tenth round finish won for "Mickey" Walker, Toledo, "Kid" Lewis in the semi-final. The latter substituted for "Battling" Henry Nera. Chick Lewis collected a unanimous assault and battery on one "Kid" White in the initial number.

MAT SHOW IN TECH GYM.

The tech wrestlers make their first at-home appearance of the season tonight, opening on with the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College team. Giles has replaced Hoffman in the 158-pound class for Tech. The visitors won last Winter's meet.

Braden Takes His Own Money and Is Pounced Upon by Buck and Dave

Snatched from the pen by Edgar Selwyn and thinking of the Park Square Theatre.

By ANN LISLE

A man somewhat under forty-five, rugged in build, of the outdoor type with keen, full eyes, and a square, pugnacious jaw with right good will. But just at that moment he was not thinking of his features, the most prominent, and, pushing them into ugly relief, crushed through the open window.

"That you, Buck? Get your shotgun, Dave."

"Eh?" said Mr. Braden, quickly, "we don't want that."

A great light burst on Fulton. "There is coming one way or another. Now let's pull the wool over and pull out of here while we have the chance," he cried.

But a great light had also burst upon Ryder. "I don't think it ought to take that course," he said. "That's what the other fellow tried to do just now and he's a burglar—if we take that money we'll be in his class—just a couple of crooks and nothing else. We're not that yet and we have the satisfaction of knowing that, whatever that appears to us of—"

"Well, if you feel that way about it, you—you—you are something better," commanded Dave.

"Because I never realized what we were doing until I saw that fellow at the safe. Let's leave the money there and take our chances the other way."

"You know what those chances are, don't you?" demanded Dave. "We'll be put in jail, that's what."

"I'll take my medicine," said Buck quietly.

"Well, it'll be a place to sleep, and they'll have to feed us anyway," cried Dave, with a certain youthful lightheartedness that made him very likable in spite of his failings.

"Are you going, Dave? Are you willing to take your medicine, too? Are you willing to fight it out on the chance that they may see it our way in the end?"

ANNA APPEARS AT A PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT

"I am if you are," said Dave.

"Then let's get out of here while we have the chance."

At this moment the dark room was flooded with light. It seemed to hold of the young culprits that the hour of reckoning had come now—instead of in the morning. For one of them it had indeed come—the hour of his most serious reckoning. For Buchanan Ryder turned to face the girl he loved.

"How did you know we were here?" he gasped.

"I waited for you at the house and you didn't come so I knew you must be here," said Anna, coldly. This final felony she felt she never could forgive—petit criminal thieving was so base and contemptible in her opinion—there was nothing about it of a lofty and daring dealing with Fate—it was just a blow in the dark, the sort of thing the lowest criminal might contrive. Buck felt himself judged in her tense—judged and condemned, and he hardly knew how to speak a word in his own defence.

"Mr. Braden and I ran down to get some things," he said at last, uneasily.

"That's not Mr. Braden," replied Anna.

"You know?" gasped Ryder.

"You've known all along?"

"You won't give us away, Miss Anderson?" cried Dave.

The girl ignored him. For her he hardly existed. The matter was a problem in which she and Ryder alone were concerned.

"I didn't believe it, because I didn't want to believe it. But you are a thief, after all!"

"No, no, Anna; we didn't do that!" cried Buck, following her glance at the shattered safe. "It was a burglar, but he got away from us."

Anna smiled at the futile absurdity of this.

"You don't lie in one any more," she said wearily.

"I'm telling you the truth!"

"You're asking the money to Stravinsky—and to that notorious—"

"We haven't touched it! It's still there. You can see for yourself," said Ryder, a certain ring in his gladness that told strongly of his relief at coloring his misery for a moment.

"Then who did you come?" demanded the girl.

Ryder straightened up and looked at her longingly. To be a man, to have such a girl as Anna Anderson and to have to defend himself before her really about his own poverty was torture, when all he wanted was just to take her in his arms, and to beg of her to love him as a girl, and trust him—if you do I'll be worthy of you.

But with an efficient young hurriedness within she Anna there could be no appeal to the emotions. Ryder knew that and he was in the bar of justice of her calm, and said that it was their duty to address and not the warm pleading sweetness of her womanhood. For the present Anna allowed to forget the fact that she was a woman and loved—as Ryder knew—and chose to ignore it, too. He answered now with brevity and precision.

SHE GIVES HIM THE LAST WORD OF DISMISSAL

"We came to get my salary, that's all. It's due tomorrow, and we needed it tonight. But we realized that it was wrong to look it that way, after we began to compare our intentions with those of the burglar who took open the safe. We were just going to leave. Oh, I know it looks rotten, but please don't judge us before you know the whole story. You ought to see it in open-minded way and give me the chance."

"I know everything, and that's enough," said Anna, coldly. "I wanted to be sure you deceived me from the start. I believed you against my own judgment. But I can't believe now against the evidence before my eyes. And now I don't want to see or hear from you ever again."

"Oh, you're all wrong, Anna. You must give me a chance—just now, perhaps, but you will give me a chance sometime, won't you?"

Anna tried to say no, but her lips refused a yes. She knew that she could not to Buck as if she were merely his stern judge. But she knew, too, that though it wrecked her whole life, some day she must be to him, even if he came to her upon prison bars.

"What's that?" gasped Mr. Fulton who was politely trying to focus his attention elsewhere so as not to hear the conversation in which he had no part.

"The police," said Anna quietly. "They were sent for."

"Good Lord, if they find us here with that safe blown open," cried Buck.

"They will think we did it," said Fulton quietly.

Suddenly Buck realized that if Anna were found with them she would be thought an accomplice. Of whatever evil she suspected him, of whatever evil he knew himself capable, this, too, he knew that he could never allow her to suffer for his wrongdoing or even because she knew him.

So now, in spite of her protestations, he forced her to the door that led to the outer offices of the factory. Then he switched off the lights, and he and Dave dropped down in hiding behind their bulwark of the desks.

The door opened and Jap Walter entered. In one quick motion he pressed on the electric lights and dashed across the room to the wrecked safe—then he reached in and took out the package of bills which had lain there undisturbed until now.

As he started to put it in his pocket Buck Ryder leaped from behind the desk in the throes of a sudden flare of imagination quite similar to the one that had inspired him to call Fulton "Braden" on the night when his outraged landlady had discovered him feeding that chance acquaintance of the North Clark Street Bridge. This seemed to be a popular evening for would-be burglars.

"Put that money back, shouted Ryder. "Put that money back, do you hear?"

THE TABLES ARE VERY SUDDENLY TURNED

Walter turned in amazement and then slipped the money into the coat pocket.

"What are you fellows doing here?"

"Never mind what we're doing here. We're caught you with the goods," retorted Ryder.

"You've caught me? I like that—when I find you fellows hiding and the safe blown open—"

"We didn't blow the safe," announced Dave.

"Well, you've done a hard job proving that," said Walter.

"We don't have to prove anything," said Ryder calmly. "You're the one who's in bad. I know that Western would get you into trouble."

"What woman?" asked Walter, amazedly.

Ryder began to grasp some part of Fulton's idea. "That woman at the flat—don't you remember what I said about her, Buck?"

"We're sorry for you, Walter, because we know you were tempted. Put that money back, and we'll give you another chance," said Buck.

"Don't make me laugh."

"You won't?"

"Certainly not. You want me to let it go so you can grab it yourself. I'm on to you both. That's what you came here for. I've got a right to this money, and I'm going to hang on to it. And in the morning I'll have you fellows up for burglary."

To Be Continued Monday.

Daily Cooking Suggestion

ALMOND CAKE

One-half cup butter, 2 cups sugar, 4 eggs, 1 cup almonds, blanched by pouring water on them until skins easily slip off, and cut in fine shreds, 1 teaspoonful baking powder, 1 glass of brandy, 1 teaspoonful extract of lemon, 1 teaspoonful extract of bitter almonds, 3 cups flour, whites of eggs, add eggs one at a time, beat well after each addition, then add flour, sifted three times together, and the butter, also, with a machine, stirred in thoroughly and well; next add almonds, extracts and lastly the eggs. It is not given to mention the right proportions of baking powder.

"An Indoor Sport!"

(With Deep Apologies to Tad)

In Winter — Browsing Through the Sheaf of Snaps Taken Last Summer

By NELL BRINKLEY

Copyright, 1916, by International News Service.

If you've been very orderly minded—of course, you have yours in a book all pasted properly down and labelled in a careful hand with sentimental and farcical titles—but if you are just a careless human with a habit of saying with little Johnny in the Fourth Reader, "In a minute! In a minute! Wait a while! Wait a while! Pretty soon! Pretty soon!" I 'spect yours are just as mine are—in curly sheafs as stiff as a board that you have to hold with spread fingers so a guest may see, while you say in intense embarrassment, "Now—now—if this was only flat and clear you could see what it was! This girl is really beautiful—but her face is a blur!"

But it's fun. To cudder up—those who were in them—and go through the pictures you took of all your fun last Summertime! There are one or two that really look like you, and are a joy, of course—but the rest—are comical mile-posts where you may stop a minute and knock on Memory's door and have a bite and sup and jolly word there.

All through the funny lot, you cry, "Don't you remember?"—There are groups where the ensemble seems just rows of glimmering teeth. Hair and eyes and shapes fade into the background.

There's the picture—in bright, white sunlight—where you wore some nice man's derby and your chum another's topper.

There's the picture of you, arms akimbo, with the sun in your eyes, wet from the sea—it's rather nice—and across the lovely sea and sky background flickers a greyhound-looking stranger as thin as a water with a graceful smile upon his face, to take his dip in the sea! "Maybe Jack can retouch him out, he's awfully clever!"

There's the one of Jack in one of your evening frocks, "extra" curls, a fan, a rose, an arch smile—and his hair showing at the ears! The little frock came within two feet of meeting in the back, and he never dared to breathe or squidge his arms back until it was all over. "Rather nice," says he.

There's a charming party of girls—all clear and beautifully taken—with the heads cut off! Neatly guillotined!

There's a mysterious one where a girl and a man stand, monstrous shadows against the sky, with lovely flashes of light zig-zagging across their spectral figures. Vague people of the Sharp-play type, meeting perhaps in the corridora of the Hollow-Land! Starved-looking folk! You don't remember which of you they are. The feet look like Jack's. Or, maybe, Dick's. Well, anyway—

There's one of Dick dancing, wrapped in seaweed, the ballet of the Nereids!

There's a row of bathing-frocked legs emerging downward from nothing in particular. The bodies of these people from the knees up are lost in mist and fog, and that in turn develops into a face awry and laughing crazily. There are palms waving softly in it, too. Strange! Somebody looked into the camera to see if the lens was closed. But who this grotesque flash of a face is, nobody knows.

There's the one where a smiling row poses before the breakers—and the feet of them draw up into the eye of the camera—huge, giant feet such as never were on sea or land.

Memory stands beside a lovely door, wherein all humans delight to pass—and from within comes laughter—and singing and sometimes the sound of falling tears.

Anecdotes of the Famous

Dr. Norman Macleod, the famous Scottish divine, before visiting India, called on an old Highland woman in Glasgow. "When ye gang to India," she said, "ye'll be seein' ma Donal' that went awa the India ten years ago, an' never sent the scrap of a pen tae his mother's auld nicee."

"But, Katie," said the doctor, "India is a very big place. How can I expect to find him?"

"Oh, but ye'll just be askin' for Donal'. What for no?"

So, to please the old woman, he promised to ask for Donald, and he conscientiously kept his word. At various ports he made inquiry among British ships, although it seemed very much like looking for a needle in a bale of hay. But it is the unexpected that happens. As Dr. Macleod's steamer went up the Hooghly River on an outward bound vessel passed close by. A sailor was leaning over the bulwarks, and, moved by a sudden impulse, the doctor shouted out:

"Are you Donald Mactavish?"

To his intense surprise the man answered, "Yes."

Dr. Macleod had only time to shout, "You're to write to your mother!" as the vessels drew apart. The result of this amazing meeting was that the old lady received a penitent letter from her long-neglectful son.

Lovers of music of the stirring, martial type will be interested to hear that John Philip Sousa, whose marches are so popular, is feted generally on his birthday.

Sousa once administered a smart snub to a certain hostess who wished to make much of him before her guests.

She invited Sousa, but no, knowing that the lady only wished to "show him off," wrote politely declining. On receipt of his letter, the lady wrote to him again, saying she was very disappointed, and ending with:

"I still hope for the pleasure of your company."

Sousa's answer to his exact have nearly given her a fit:

"I have given your kind message to my company," he wrote, "but I regret that only fifty of them will be able to accept your invitation, as the rest have appointments elsewhere."

FOR darkness passes, storms shall not abide,
A little patience and the fog is past;
After the sorrow of the sibling tide,
The singing floods return in joy at last.

The night is long, and pain wrings But God will hold His worst above despair;
Look to the East, where up the lurid sky
The morning clambs! The day shall yet be fair.

"Some people who boast of family trees wouldn't have any more sense than to saw off the limb they happened to be sitting on."

No engaged girl likes to hear her fiance's head of the "other sex" who were commiting to marry her, but some married men make the clamor of the others had been a little louder.

Having the courage of your convictions does not always pay—but having only the courage of other people's convictions generally makes you pay them.

When anyone does not know how to receive a favor he may be equally ignorant about offering one.

IF A MAN IS CLEVER

He ought to discover that fact without leaving his attention called to it—and refrain from calling other people's attention to it.

No girl can "keep him guessing" very long, he guesses right!

And Such a Difference!

A school teacher had considerable difficulty in distinguishing her class boys by distinguish between "Miss" and "Mrs." After making a very few observations, she said to one lad, loudest, now what is the difference between Miss and Mrs?"

Whereupon Robert, one of the slowest children in the class, startled her with the answer, "Hilafter."

Abraham Lincoln as an Antidote for the Blues

WASHINGTON is called the father of his country and Lincoln is called its eldest brother, in the old-fashioned sense that the eldest brother preserved and kept together the family when it was bereft of its father.

The story of Lincoln ought to be inspiring to the youth of America, because it shows how great occasions can make great men, and how little we can be sure that we are failures until our allotted time has run.

Solon, the wise man of Greece, was shown by Croesus, the rich king of Lydia, his vast treasures and asked if he did not consider Croesus the happiest man in the world. Solon replied, "Count no man happy until he has died." Nor can we count any man a failure sooner.

No young man who follows through the life of Lincoln and observes Lincoln's struggles, his disappointments, his fits of "blues," can help observing that ambition should always remember that "behind the clouds there is the sun." We none of us know what is latent and potential in us until the occasion has called it forth. General Grant was a failure according to worldly standards when the Civil War broke out—almost middle-aged, completely unsuccessful and thoroughly disgusted.

So much has been written and said of Lincoln's greatness that we take this little space to urge young men and women to read Lincoln's life, that they may extract from it courage to meet with disappointment bravely, and to understand that there are higher tests of success than the accumulation of money; and that in the worst failure may be the seeds of the greatest success; that a blessing to our ambition may come in the disguise of a very great disappointment.

Boys Who Learn to Love Their Country Will Fight For It, if Need Be, When They Are Men

Copyright, 1916, by the Star Company

IN the days to come this country will need soldiers and sailors. They must be better soldiers and sailors than those of other countries — more intelligent, more efficient, more PATRIOTIC.

Where are these soldiers and sailors to come from? At present we have no regular training institutions outside of the colleges for officers. The few men these colleges turn out are not nearly sufficient to act as instructors of an army, should an army be needed.

The national guard in many instances gives men the right sort of training, but it does not begin early enough, and it must rely on business men who have little time for their soldier practice.

But there is an organization that is working in the right way to do this most important work. That organization is the Boy Scouts.

It begins with boys early, when they are filled with energy and enthusiasm.

It teaches them high principles, love of country, and the right way to live.

It teaches them how to keep healthy in mind and body.

Boys who are taught to observe, to study, while they are outdoors, soon learn what a wonderful land is America.

They understand its beauty, its great resources. They come to know why the white men who discovered it performed a miracle for the human race, and why people from foreign shores are glad to come here and be American citizens.

In that way the boys become patriots. They learn that the country is worth loving. They become willing to fight for it if need be, to make any sacrifice rather than have an enemy take America from the American people.

Camping in the woods, doing their own work in the ways that are best and simplest, the boys become self-reliant. In after life they will be better fitted to meet the troubles that must come to everybody. A little poverty will not discourage them. Their minds have been taught that hardships can be overcome, that things that seem to the pampered boy as dreadful privations make no actual difference in happiness.

Towns where there are scout bands are cleaner and better. There are fewer vicious boys. Little chaps who have no home influences to give them the right course are glad to become scouts, and as scouts they make up as far as is possible for the lack of parents' care.

The work of the scout gives the boy's active imagination something to think about. He gets a taste for good books, learns to think straight and live straight.

When the day comes, if it must come, that the country needs defending, the young men with training will be the reliance of the country.

And first among these will be the young men who as boys learned love of country, and acquired bodily strength and skill in all the many arts needful to an army, as members of the Boy Scouts.

"Malice toward none; charity for all."

WHEN Lincoln started for Washington, fifty-five years ago yesterday, to take the Presidency, he bade farewell to his fellow-townsmen of Springfield, Ill., in these memorable words:

My Friends: No one, not in my situation, can appreciate my feeling of sadness at this parting. To this place, and the kindness of these people, I owe everything. Here I have lived a quarter of a century, and have passed from a young to an old man. Here my children have been born, and one is buried. I now leave, not knowing when or whether ever I may return, with a task before me greater than that which rested upon Washington. Without the assistance of that Divine Being who ever attended him, I cannot succeed. With that assistance I cannot fail. Trusting in Him who can go with me, and remain with you, and be everywhere for good, let us confidently hope that all will yet be well. To His care commending you, as I hope in your prayers you will commend me, I bid you an affectionate farewell.

One of Lincoln's masterpieces was his second inaugural address in 1865, of which the following is the concluding paragraph:

With malice toward none; with charity for all; with firmness in the right, as God gives us to see the right, let us strive to finish the work we are in; to bind up the nation's wounds; to care for him who shall have borne the battle, and for his widow and his orphan—to do all which may achieve and cherish a just and lasting peace among ourselves and with all nations.

Your Fat Friend Lives on the Brink of a Volcano. Caution Him.

He MAY Find Consolation in the Thought That Balzac Looked Like a Hogshead, That Dr. Johnson Was Flabby, and That for Six Years the Immortal Rossini Did Not See His Feet, But SCIENCE Says, Nevertheless, That the Fat Man Dies Twenty Years Before His Time. Recommend to Your Friend Amelia Summerville's Story in the Sunday AMERICAN, "How I Lost One Hundred Pounds in a Year."

Once upon a time, when Chester A. Arthur was President, the more favored communities throughout the United States flocked en masse to the opr'y house, to see a wonderful burlesque called "Adonis." Some of the men still talk about it. We could name several, whom we see in the audience this afternoon, who remained overnight in the lobby of a certain Boston playhouse to wait for the tickets to be placed on sale. Heigho! There were plays and players, in THOSE days.

The star of "Adonis" was Henry E. Dixey, a Boston boy. Somebody had to go and "discover," the other day, that John Drew is sixty. Henry Dixey, still slender, handsomer today than this Lou-Tellegen they tell about in the papers, is somewhat younger than Drew. In his "Adonis" days, and nights, Dixey was twenty-five. His photograph was everywhere. The girls raved about him. NO actor, of today, is so popular as Dixey was then.

One of the big "features" of "Adonis" was the Merry Mountain Maid, represented by Miss Amelia Summerville.

The Merry Mountain Maid was a mountain of flesh, a youthful giantess, quite like one of the lady Dan'l Lamberts you see billed before the side-shows on the circus lot, or at the Sagadahoc County Fair.

A venerable Britisher of our acquaintance, long since gone to his reward, was fond of his theory that Amelia Summerville was a great-great-great grand-daughter of the original Daniel Lambert, who, the Britisher said, weighed "32 stone" at the age of twenty-three, and at the time of his death, fifteen years later, tipped the scales at "52 stone and not one stone less." A stone, as schoolboys know, is the equivalent of fourteen pounds, avoirdupois.

Well?

Well, now comes Miss Amelia Summerville, the "famously fat" Amelia Summerville of "Adonis" and those wonderful days of the middle eighties, to tell us how she lost ONE HUNDRED POUNDS IN A SINGLE YEAR!

Miss Summerville has written a book about it. She calls her book, "Why Be Fat?"

And, for the benefit of the innocently obese in New England, on behalf of New Englanders who are fat but who do not WANT to be fat, the Sunday AMERICAN tomorrow will devote an entire page of its magazine section to the Merry Mountain Maid's story of how she did it. There is an impressive picture of Amelia Summerville as she appeared at the time the United States was daffy over Mr. Adonis. There is a STUNNING picture of Miss Summerville as she looks today. One MIGHT call these pictures "Before" and "After." The second is guaranteed to be an inspiration—aye, Captain, even a command—to the corpulent, to go and do likewise.

And it is "just as easy!"

When you consult an Authority, you know, the Authority suggests that the way to cure corpulency—which IS a disease—is to "avoid a diet containing sugar and starch; and you come away wondering just which articles of diet DO contain sugar and starch. Miss Summerville furnishes the CHART. Within twelve months she banished a triple chin, reduced a too generous bust and cut six inches off her hips!

"How I Lost One Hundred Pounds in a Year" is NOT dedicated to the heavy and happy gentlemen of the Fat Men's Club. There ARE gentlemen who are fat and proud of it. If to one of these you quote the distinguished authority who holds that "the stupid, heavy, non-intellectual person, or the idol, is as a rule flabby and fat," HE may remind you—quite properly and quite truthfully—that Napoleon was rotund, that Dr. Johnson was fleshy and flabby and Boswell ditto, that Victor Hugo was quite Daniel Lambertish, Alexander Dumas too heavy, Balzac a hogshead and Rossini so fat that, for the last six years of his life, he could not see his feet!

Science, nevertheless, admonishes the fat man that he lives on the brink of a volcano; that he is never safe; that an illness of no importance to a thin person is often fatal to the corpulent.

About fifty years ago, when William Banting addressed to the public his celebrated "Letter on Corpulence," the world began fighting fat in earnest. Banting put the ban on bread, butter, milk, sugar, beer and potatoes. Dr. Wilhelm Ebstein of Wiesbaden, who turned his scientific guns in the same direction fifteen years later, was less severe. Ebstein permitted plenty of butter.

Amelia Summerville's way, which will be fully explained in the Sunday AMERICAN, is gentler and more reasonable than either Banting or Ebstein. With it will be printed safe and sane recipes for fleshy people and, following the Summerville directions, one may, indeed, eat and grow thin.

Thousands of our friends throughout New England will not need to be reminded again that the ONLY way to be sure of a copy of the Sunday AMERICAN is to order it in advance from their regular newsdealers. Agents in all parts of New England were all out of last Sunday's AMERICANS before the noon hour. These newsdealers WILL have larger supplies tomorrow, but, as the Sunday AMERICAN continues to grow in popularity, it will still be the part of preparedness to order in advance. There is no denying one of the big truths of American journalism:

The Sunday AMERICAN is New England's greatest Sunday newspaper!
